Official Tally Gives County To Markey By 3 Votes

Prince Georges Is Lost to Butler; Queen Anne's Bribe Attempt Reported

By Edward F. Ryan and Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporters

John Marshall Butler, Baltimore lawyer, lost the seven unit votes of Prince Georges County to his opponent, D. John Markey, in the Maryland Republican primary for the United States senatorial nomination.

Unofficial tallies had given Prince Georges' convention votes to Butler. The official tally, turned in yesterday, showed Markey winner of the county by three votes. The total was Butler, 1656 votes and Markey, 1659.

At the same time, however, Butler gained the four unit votes of Worcester County, not previously tallied for either candidate in unofficial returns.

Net result on the basis of combined official and unofficial returns was that Butler appeared sure of 75 unit votes, leading for seven more, and reported likely to get another 7 for a possible combined total of 89. Before the Worcester votes he claimed 78, one more than the majority needed to nominate. Markey appeared sure of 60 convention votes with three more from St. Mary's, probably going his way.

Barring other developments, it appeared that everything from now on in the counting would have to go against Butler and for Markey for the latter to win.

Butler has claimed the victory on the basis of 78 unit votes—one more than the majority needed to nominate—from voting areas in which the unofficial return either showed him to be the winner or substantially in the lead.

Butler's claim did not include in his total the Prince Georges County unit votes.

Markey has not conceded.

In Cecil, Markey had led from earlier returns in a neck-and-neck race.

Butler's claim to victory was based on unofficial returns giving him a sweep of Baltimore's 42 convention votes, plus Anne Arun-

Girl, 20, Thrown From Auto When She Resists 2 Men

A 20-year-old Hillside, Md., woman, who told police she was knocked out of an automobile when she resisted the advances of two men, was admitted to Garfield Hospital last night.

The victim, Miss Margaret McCord, of 1223 48th ave., Hillside, was found lying in the gutter of the 1800 block 15th st. nw. about 8:30 p. m. She suffered possible head injuries.

Miss McCord said her companion in the front seat of the car opened the door on her side and the man in the back seat knocked her out with his fist, according to Lieut. Richard Felber of the Police Homicide Squad. She named the men, and police later picked up one, identified as Norbert F. Osborne, 28, 3200 E st. se. He was held on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

Magic Words?

The seven words, "I want to place a classified ad." are not exactly magic—but they do produce money at very little effort for Post want ad advertisers. Not out of a hat—but out of used cars, used furniture, old model typewriters and other unneeded items.

Take Mrs. William Lauchman, for example: She turned her spare apartment-size washing machine into $15.00 by placing a two-line ad in The Washington Post at a cost of 66c.

If you have items you no longer use, you can turn them into cash, too. All you have to do is call NAtional 4200 and say, "I want to place a classified ad."

U. S. Working on Plans to Check Rising Food Cost, Truman Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman showed concern yesterday over the high cost of living. He said the Government was working on plans to deal with rising food prices, but he declined to predict when controls might be imposed.

Other highlights of Mr. Truman's weekly news conference were:

He backed up W. Averell Harriman's charge that Senator Taft (R., Ohio), has furthered "the designs of the Kremlin," saying that Taft's record speaks for itself.

He said that the question of what our troops will do when they reach the 38th Parallel in Korea was a matter for the United Nations to decide. He added that this country will abide by whatever decision the U. N. makes.

He praised the Eighty-first Congress, saying that it had given him substantially what he had asked for. There was some unfinished business, he said, but all in all he was well pleased.

The question of living costs came up when a reporter reminded Mr. Truman that, while most people's wages were remaining stationary, food prices were going up very fast.

Mr. Truman said he agreed with that, and added, in reply to another question, that the Administration was working on plans all the time to meet the situation.

"Can you tell us how soon?" he was asked.

The President replied that he could not say how soon action would be taken—that he was no prophet. He said that the Administration was trying to avoid the mistakes that were made at the beginning of World War II. He said it was seeking to attain a position like that at the end of the war, thereby avoiding all the travail that comes of the trial and error process.

He was asked about Chester Bowles' visit to the White House on Wednesday. Bowles outlined a plan for imposing selective controls on basic commodities as soon as possible.

Mr. Truman said that this had

Steelworkers To Ask Higher Pay in October

Union Move Involves Reopening Contracts With 1400 Firms

(Alcoa, Others Voluntarily Boost Wages, Page 26)

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 21 (AP).—The CIO United Steelworkers served notice today on the Nation's steel industry that it will seek a wage increase next month.

President Philip Murray said the big union's executive board had voted to ask 1400 big and little steel companies to reopen wage provisions of their contracts October 9.

The contracts call for reopening of wages November 1. Murray said the companies will be requested to advance that date, saying:

"Obviously, the national interest requires that we conclude a mutually satisfactory agreement at the earliest possible date."

Murray said that if the steel industry did not agree to advance the date for bargaining conferences, the union will adhere to the contract provisions.

The contract also provides that if no agreement is reached on wage demands by December 31, the union is free to strike January 1.

Murray made the announcement at the conclusion of the first day's session of a scheduled two-day meeting of the 36-man USW executive board.

The union president said the USW wage policy committee will meet in Pittsburgh October 4 and 5 to draw up the exact wage demand.

Murray listed three reasons why the National interests require higher pay for his million-odd USW members.

They were:

"1. The needs of our people.

"2. The Nation at present is going through a period of national mobilization. No doubt in the next few months will begin to be felt shortages of manpower, particularly where questions of wages have not been settled.

"3. The question of maintaining morale at a high level during a grave national emergency."

District Seeks 312 Policemen, $9,107,000

Budget Request Includes $521,000 For Reserve Corps

($521,000 Asked for Auxiliary Police, Page B-1)

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

A million-dollar item to provide 312 additional policemen highlights the $9,107,000 Metropolitan Police Department budget requests for fiscal 1952.

The department's estimate of money needs, released yesterday by the District Commissioners, also includes a request of $521,000 to uniform and arm a 4000-man police reserve corps. Budget officials indicated that this item may be taken out of the police budget and lumped with others in a civil defense budget.

The $9,107,000 figure does not include $900,000 needed to pay for the five-day police work week. District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler said this had been left out of the estimates and will have to be inserted.

Nor does it include $1,291,829 expected in reimbursements — money transferred to the Police Department for its use. Most of this would come from the highway fund to pay expenses of the police traffic division.

Thus the Police Department hopes to obtain from various sources about $11,300,000 for spending in the year starting next July 1. This compares with $8,570,812 allowed police in the 1951 District Appropriation Act plus $500,000 approved by joint resolution of Congress earlier this week for the five-day week.

Police Supt. Robert J. Barrett said he had requested the additional policemen, including 225 privates, next year simply to bring the department up to proper strength. The request has nothing to do with the five-day week, he said. Three hundred privates will be hired this year to put the shorter work week into effect.

The 312 positions asked for next year, together with the 300

Bar Group Picks Patterson To Direct Its Fight on Crim

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Robert P. Patterson, former Secretary of War, was chosen yesterday to head the American Bar Association's fight against organized crime.

The association designated Patterson, a one-time Federal judge, to lead a seven-man committee which will investigate legal weapons against the Nation's leading criminal elements.

The committee will work with Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) and his Senate investigating committee now looking into what Kefauver terms a 15-billion-dollar gambling racket, and other organized crime.

The association committee will try to plug legal loopholes through which criminals escape and to revise criminal law procedure to bring it up to date. The association has labeled part of the law "archaic."

Also appointed to the committee was Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court here.

The other members are Howard L. Barkdull of Ohio, Walter P. Armstrong, jr., of Tennessee; Laurence M. Hyde, of Missouri, Philip S. Habermann of Wisconsin, and Arthur J. Freund of Missouri.

The association urged that labor unions be subject to regulation by the Government whenever their activities jeopardize the "national economy, health or safety."

Approval of this resolution was given by the ABA House of Delegates meeting at the Statler as the national lawyers' group neared the end of its 10-day convention here.

The delegates sent back to com-

U. S. Proposal Moves Up for U. N. Debate

No Dissent Heard From Russians in Committee on Step To Curb Aggression

NEW YORK, Sept. 21 (AP). The U. N. Assembly's steering committee today called for full debate on an American program for combatting aggression and on a Soviet counter-bid for peace on the lines of the Communist-backed Stockholm peace appeal.

Without a murmur of dissent, the major proposals of United States Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky were moved toward the Assembly by the 14-member steering committee.

Other Decisions

In other decisions, the committee voted down Russian objections and recommended Assembly consideration of:

1. A charge from Nationalist China that the Soviet Union helped the Chinese Communists attain power and is a threat to the peace of the Far East. The vote was 11 to 2 (Russia and Czechoslovakia) with India abstaining.

2. A demand by the United States, Britain and Australia for Russia to account for thousands of German and Japanese war prisoners. The vote was 12 to 2 (Russia and Czechoslovakia).

3. A review of the Franco Spain situation. The Dominican Republic wants the Assembly to study again its 1946 resolution to recall Ambassadors from Madrid. The vote was 10 to 2 (Russia and Czechoslovakia), with Cuba and Iran abstaining.

4. A review of the Balkans situation. The vote again was 12 to 2 (Russia and Czechoslovakia).

Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain, president of the Security Council this month, tangled with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob A. Malik on the Soviet proposal that the Assembly take up a charge of American aggression against China.

Calls it Ridiculous

Jebb called it "ridiculous" and "propaganda" and in effect demanded that the Russians show their hands on this charge.

Jebb's attack drew only a mild retort from Malik that the word "propaganda" no longer means anything and a promise to turn in the explanations sometime later.

The moderate Soviet course at this General Assembly is a marked contrast to the fire-and-brimstone style usually adopted by Vishinsky and his group. This has caused considerable talk among U. N. delegates.

The General Assembly will not meet on Friday because of a Moslem holiday.

Korean Peace Move Seen Possible at U.N.

Non-Soviet Delegates Discussing Subject Behind-the-Scenes

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Sept. 21—Leading non-Soviet delegations to the United Nations today began behind-the-scenes consultations to get ready for possible Russian peace overtures on Korea.

Peace was in the air here, although there were no reports from Korea to substantiate the rumors, and no actual move by the Russians to seek a negotiated settlement. The Soviet delegates behaved as if they had been instructed to play down Korea and to write it off as a lost cause.

For the second successive day they were mild and almost gentle in their manner. They repeated many of their favorite propaganda slogans, but without shouting them, during a meeting of the steering committee to decide which items should go onto the Assembly's agenda.

They did not mention their well-worn story that American "imperialists" and South Korean "traitors" had started the fighting in Korea. They raised no objection to letting the Assembly discuss Secretary Acheson's four-point program for guarding against future aggression.

The only real sparks that flew from Foreign Minister Vishinsky or Ambassador Jacob A. Malik were over the alleged American "aggression" against China, in

Adopts Substitute

House Rejects Iron Curtain Trade Rider

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The House of Representatives yesterday declined to go along with the Senate in flatly prohibiting economic aid to countries which export war materials behind the Iron Curtain.

By the heavily one-sided vote of 286 to 30, the House approved an Administration sponsored substitute for the Wherry amendment to the emergency appropriation bill which would have defined materials whose export would have halted U. S. financial aid.

The Administration substitute, proposed by Chairman Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee, would leave it up to the National Security Council to determine what exports would be "contrary to the security interests of the United States." Countries exporting such materials to Russia and its satellites would be denied economic assistance.

With adoption of the Cannon amendment, the House sent the 17-billion-dollar money measure back to the Senate with eight points of disagreement still to be ironed out.

In the Senate the bill ran into a filibuster by Senator Malone (R., Nev.) against the bill to regulate slot machines. Senator Johnson (D., Colo.), sponsor of the slot-machine bill, said he would not permit debate on that measure to be halted long enough to consider the money bill.

In addition, Senator Wherry (R., Neb.) said he would not accept the House substitute for his amendment, which had been adopted by the Senate without a dissenting vote. As a result, the House amendment appeared to be headed for a stiff floor fight which might throw the appropriations bill again into conference.

The vote by which the House finally adopted the Cannon amendment was in sharp contrast to the opposition voiced on the floor by Republican leaders and by Repre-

Marshall Takes Oath; Starts Defense Duties

New Secretary Flies To Rochester for Talk, Stresses Need for UMT

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Gen. George C. Marshall took office as Secretary of Defense yesterday and immediately plunged into a grueling round of duties.

He took the oath of office at a 9:45 a. m. private ceremony at the Pentagon, held a series of conferences with Defense officials, and then flew to Rochester, N. Y., for a testimonial dinner to an old friend, retiring Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N.Y.).

There in his maiden speech as Defense Secretary, Marshall made an appeal for universal military training. He declared we wouldn't be in our present position had Congress approved the UMT bill Wadsworth sponsored in 1920.

Today, the 69-year-old former Army Chief of Staff and Secretary of State will be in New York City for a meeting with the British and French defense ministers, where the big question is rearming Germany.

Meeting with the press shortly after noon yesterday, the new Defense chief side-stepped most questions on current issues. He did, however, make it plain that in his testimony on Capitol Hill earlier in the week he was not disavowing our postwar China policy.

Answering questions on his mission to China in 1945-46, Marshall told Senators he had been testifying before a Congressional committee (on the Pearl Harbor investigation) during the week between his appointment as a special ambassador and his departure for China, while the policy he was to carry out was being drafted. That policy, he said, was radioed to him while he was en route across the Pacific.

Asked yesterday whether he meant to disclaim or disavow that policy, he replied: "Not at all, I

Malone Filibuster of 11 Hours Bars Vote on Slot Machine Bill

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

An 11-hour 10-minute filibuster in the Senate last night killed the anti-slot machine bill, at least until after the election recess of Congress.

The man who did it was Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.). He started talking at 12:15 p. m., and didn't sit down until 11:25 p. m.

The Senate quit for the night shortly afterward with a leadership agreement to displace the bill with more important measures at today's meeting.

Malone—who had filibustered the bill for several hours on Wednesday as well—spent most of the time yesterday berating the Administration's tariff policy, only incidentally touching on the bill to ban interstate shipment of the one-armed bandits.

He sipped water and orange juice occasionally as he talked at a fairly rapid pace, estimated at 9000 words an hour.

At one point last night, Majority Leader Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) questioned Malone's right to eat a cut-up sandwich brought in to him on the Senate floor. At this Malone drew back a fist and invited Lucas to "come over here" if he wanted "to make a personal matter out of this." But nothing more happened.

The record filibuster for any present member of the Senate is the 12-hour, 19-minute talkathon by Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) in 1949. The all-time record was 18 hours and 23 minutes by Senator Robert M. LaFollette, sr., in 1908.

The anti-slot machine bill grew out of the Attorney General's Crime Conference, a gathering of State and local law enforcement officials here last February. They asked for the bill to help smash the multi-million dollar one-armed bandit racket. The bill passed the Senate unanimously in April and was approved by an overwhelming House vote in August.

Malone was filibustering the conference report on the measure. He contended that Nevada, under the terms of the bill, would not be able to send any of its 7000 slot machines back to the manufacturers in Chicago for repair. He also read a Washington Post story of Wednesday reporting that Governor Adlai Stevenson of Illinois was considering a legal move to put an end to slot machine manufacturing in Chicago where the entire industry is concentrated.

The bill, Malone charged, amounted to a Federal effort to "nullify" the action of the Nevada Legislature in making slots legal in that state. Nevada is the only State which permits Statewide gambling. Maryland permits slots in four counties under local option.

Army Eases Soldier Bite

Draft Losses End Dental Bar; Even Toothless Can Go Fight

In a move to cut the draftee rejection rate, the Army has ordered a sharp reduction in its dental induction standards, it was learned yesterday.

An order issued September 14—which has yet to be received by the area induction center at Arlington Farms, Va.—lowers the dental requirements of the present draftees to the standards of World War II.

Shortly after the last war, because of an acute shortage of dentists, the Army raised its dental standards, demanding that an inductee have eight upper and eight lower teeth directly opposite.

Under the eased regulations, all that will be required of the draftee, so far as dental standards go, are two firm jaws. He need not possess a single tooth of his own.

No figures are available on the number of draftees who've been rejected during the Korean war for failure to pass the dental exams, but National Selective Service headquarters here has called such failure the leading cause of physical rejection.

Draftees turned back at the pre-induction tests solely for inability to produce the full set of eight teeth (above and below) can expect to be reclassified and called up for service.

On Capitol Hill, Representative Tom Steed (D., Okla.) said yesterday that Selective Service officials have promised to study the possibility of suspending inductions in Oklahoma for several months because the State already has sent 16,000 men into the armed forces since the Korean war began, chiefly through the National Guard.

Steed pointed out that under Selective Service rules States are given credit for volunteer enlistments when ther draft quotas are fixed.

Bayonets Are Used At Yongdungpo; 5000 of Foe Trapped On Southern Front

By William J. Waugh

TOKYO (Friday), Sept. 22 (AP).—Two main columns of United States Marines advanced on Seoul Thursday, one reaching the northern outskirts 2 1/2 miles from the Korean capital's center while the other conquered the bulk of the southwestern suburb of Yongdungpo.

Red resistance was described by frontline reports as some of the toughest since the Allied landings at Inchon September 15.

The South Korean Republic's radio at Pusan said the Marines were driving into Seoul from three directions and that an underground uprising was in progress against the Communists inside the city, but it gave no details, and neither of its reports was confirmed.

The drive on Seoul was two-pronged, with each prong split into two forces.

The north prong was that which crossed the Han River Wednesday. One force began pushing down a railroad near the river bank. It ran into heavy opposition.

The other force pushed inland against Reds on dominating heights at the northern edge of Seoul. Thursday night the Leathernecks dug in on the last high ridge overlooking the city. They had halted because of heavy mortar and small arms fire.

The southern prong, moving along a highway due east of Inchon, got into a bitter fight at Yongdungpo, an industrial suburb across the Han from southwestern Seoul. These Marines struck at Yongdungpo from two sides.

The southernmost element cracked through the suburb. It was reported in position to swing down the Han's bank toward bomb-blasted bridges leading to Seoul.

Marines fighting through the fiery streets of Yongdungpo suffered "relatively heavy casualties," said Associated Press Corres-

Vishinsky Leaves Dinner as Dewey Hits 'Slave Labor'

NEW YORK, Sept. 21 (AP).—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky walked out tonight when Gov. Thomas E. Dewey told a United Nations dinner that Russia has millions of slave laborers.

Dewey was addressing a Waldorf-Astoria Hotel dinner of delegates at which the City of New York was host.

In the course of a speech in which Dewey pledged Republican backing to Secretary of State Dean Acheson's latest U. N. proposals, Dewey charged Russia has interned from ten to fifteen million people in slave labor camps.

The reference was in the third paragraph of his prepared speech.

At that point, Vishinsky took his walk.

Summer, Rain To End Saturday

Summer ends at 10:44 a. m. Saturday—the moment when the sun is directly over the equator in its yearly southward motion.

The Weatherman said to expect intermittent showers today but said Saturday and Sunday should be cloudy but dry with moderate temperatures.

Law Fails to Lure Doctor Volunteers

Army Gets Both

Father, Son Shove Off for Camp Today

A father-son combination is scheduled to leave the District today for active duty with the Army.

Sergt. Samuel E. Harris, sr., 38, and his son, Samuel E., jr., 17, were to shove off in opposite directions this morning—the father for Camp Pickett, Va., the son for Fort Meade, Md.

Sergeant Harris, a veteran of the China-Burma-India theater in World War II, was ordered to active duty with the 210th Quartermaster Laundry Company September 1. His outfit has been stationed at 2131 C st. nw. awaiting assignment.

Private Harris, a senior at Armstrong High School, volunteered for active duty in the Army yesterday when his father received his travel orders.

Sergeant Harris, auditor with the Bureau of Federal Supplies since his discharge in 1946, lives at 1510 49th ave., Beaver Heights, Md. He leaves behind his wife, Mrs. Kathryn Harris, and three daughters, Gwendolyn, 15; Louise, 18, and Mrs. Leola Nelson.

Although it's a fortnight since President Truman signed the doctor-draft law, not a single physician liable to the call has volunteered for active military service in the Second Army's eight-state area, it was disclosed yesterday.

Doctors who are drafted are barred by the new law from receiving a $100 a month bonus given to volunteers. Even so, neither the bonus nor the imminent possibility of being drafted has stirred up any volunteering in the District, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio or Kentucky.

Volunteers Lacking

Col. Harold W. Glattly, medical chief of the Second Army headquartered at Fort Meade, Md., said yesterday that 10 medical corps reservists — though none from the District—have volunteered in two weeks, but not one draft-status doctor.

The doctor-draft law was aimed principally at several thousand physicians trained at Government expense during World War II, but who saw little or no military service. Pentagon officials had expressed the view that the mere passage of the legislation would bring a flood of volunteers, and make the draft unnecessary.

Now, however, military authorities are not so sure. There are no national figures available of volunteers among the draft-liable doctors, but the feeling is that the response has been very poor.

Colonel Glattly said yesterday that despite the Army's reluctance to do so, it might be necessary to call up Reserve medical officers to meet military requirements unless the doctor-draft law produces soon the needed medical manpower.

Selective Service headquarters here is working out a plan for registering the draft-liable doctors. Announcement of a registration date is expected any day now.

Economic Experts See World Dollar Deficits Shifting

GENEVA, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—The world's dollar problem may disappear as the result of the Korean conflict and the West's rearmament drive, United Nations economic experts here said today.

They predicted, however, Europe's deficit with the United States may be replaced by deficits with other parts of the globe if the present scramble for raw materials continues. That vast deficit, which has characterized the entire world economy since the war, is now shifting in the other direction.

The U. N. economists estimated that the world is today accumulating dollar credits at the rate of two billion dollars annually. This compares with a world dollar deficit of some four billion dollars in 1949.

Soaring prices for rubber, tin and wool from Far Eastern British Commonwealth nations or territories are partly responsible.

2 Area Veterans of Last War Reported Wounded in Action

Two area Army men—one a Marine veteran and the other a sailor during World War II—have been wounded in action in Korea.

The Marine veteran, Pfc. Clarence O. Ball, 24, son of Mrs. Sylvia Ball Washington, Shreve rd., Falls Church, sent his mother a letter on September 3 in which he said he had been wounded in the nose and shoulder.

Corpl. Cromwell

In his description of the action in which he was wounded, he said "Koreans fight very simply and come running and yelling, trying to disorganize us."

"We shot them down like flies," he added.

Ball served two years in the South Pacific with the Marine Corps during World War II. He saw action at Okinawa and later was on occupation duty in Japan. After his discharge from the Marines, he was a construction maintenance worker for a private contractor.

He enlisted in the Army last May and was sent to Korea in the middle of June, his mother said.

Ball was born at Bailey's Crossroads and went to elementary school there. He was attending Manassas Vocational School when he enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1944. He has four brothers, three of whom saw Army service during World War II, and three sisters. His father, William L. Ball, lives in Bailey's Crossroads.

Corpl. John L. Cromwell, 23, nephew of Mrs. Alice Anderson, 1416 U st. nw., was also listed as wounded on Defense Department casualty list No. 102.

Cromwell, who served in the Navy during the last war, was slightly injured on September 7, his aunt has been informed.

He was fighting with the Twenty-fifth Infantry Division.

After his discharge from the Navy in 1946, Cromwell attended Blackwell Business Colege here. He enlisted in the Army in June, 1949, and left for Korea in June this year, his aunt said. He had been stationed at Fort Dix, N. J., until he was sent to Korea.

A native of Goochland County, Va., Cromwell lived with his aunt in Washington for a number of years before enlisting in the Navy. He has two brothers and sisters and his father, Harry Cromwell, lives in Goochland County.

Forty-nine Washington area men have been wounded in Korea to date. Fourteen have been kiled, three injured and 19 are currently missing in action.

More Reds Gi... Peace Hopes

By O. H. P. King

TOKYO (Friday), Sept. 22 (A.P.).—Some sources here speculated today that several hundred North Korean soldiers who gave up the Red cause yesterday may be the vanguard of wholesale surrenders and quick peace in Korea.

Other quarters, aware of grim realities on the fighting fronts, where resistance is still stiff, hesitated to predict such a trend. The Reds hastily shifting troops to adjust for the United Nations offensive in the Inchon-Seoul sector, are fighting determinedly to hold Seoul.

Whatever may follow, almost every sector saw enemy troops toss in the towel yesterday. Defections ranged from that of a divisional Chief of Staff to 200 men of the North Korean lines, many of them boys 14 and 15 years old.

The Chief of Staff is Senior Col. Lee Hak Ku, 30, of the North Korean Thirteenth Division, highest ranking Red officer yet to surrender. Lee gave up to the United States First Cavalry Division in southeast Korea, saying he had decided Democracy was the best way of life.

The youths were among troops who surrendered in the Inchon-Kimpo-Seoul area.

Associated Press Correspondent Ben Price reported that dozens of North Koreans, including a political commissar, surrendered near Waegwan. They carried safe conduct leaflets dropped by United States planes.

Price reported 86 Red surrenders within 24 hours in the Twen...

3d Infantry Has Birthday Celebration

Hundreds of well-wishers turned out for an open house at Fort Myer yesterday to help the Third Infantry (Old Guard) Regiment celebrate its 166th birthday.

Events included a parade and review before Col. J. V. Cole, commanding officer of the regiment. Co. Lester A. Sprinkle, chief of staff for the Military District of Washington, spoke. A dance with music by the United States Army Band was set for last night in the Fort Myer gym.

The Third, organized in 1784, has fought in all the Nation's wars. The outfit got its nickname during the Mexican War, when the regiment was moving up, and Gen. Winfield Scott, turning to members of his staff, said: "Gentlemen! take off your hats to the Old Guard of the Army."

Toronto U. Physicist Units to Stay in Poland

TORONTO, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—Physicist Leopold Infeld, former colleague of Dr. Albert Einstein, has resigned from the University of Toronto to work in Poland, it was revealed today. He denied he was a Communist when he left for Europe last March.

Dr. Infeld, who collaborated with Einstein two years ago on a best-selling scientific book, wrote that he decided to remain in his native Poland because of "excellent conditions for research and scientific work and for instructing the young Polish generation." He said he found a "tremendous desire for peace" in Poland.

Law Fails to Lure Doctor Volunteers

Army Gets Both

Father, Son Shove Off for Camp Today

A father-son combination is scheduled to leave the District today for active duty with the Army.

Sergt. Samuel E. Harris, sr., 38, and his son, Samuel E., jr., 17, were to shove off in opposite directions this morning—the father for Camp Pickett, Va., the son for Fort Meade, Md.

Sergeant Harris, a veteran of the China-Burma-India theater in World War II, was ordered to active duty with the 210th Quartermaster Laundry Company September 1. His outfit has been stationed at 2131 C st. nw. awaiting assignment.

Private Harris, a senior at Armstrong High School, volunteered for active duty in the Army yesterday when his father received his travel orders.

Sergeant Harris, auditor with the Bureau of Federal Supplies since his discharge in 1946, lives at 1510 49th ave., Beaver Heights, Md. He leaves behind his wife, Mrs. Kathryn Harris, and three daughters, Gwendolyn, 15; Louise, 18, and Mrs. Leola Nelson.

Although it's a fortnight since President Truman signed the doctor-draft law, not a single physician liable to the call has volunteered for active military service in the Second Army's eight-state area, it was disclosed yesterday.

Doctors who are drafted are barred by the new law from receiving a $100 a month bonus given to volunteers. Even so, neither the bonus nor the imminent possibility of being drafted has stirred up any volunteering in the District, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio or Kentucky.

Volunteers Lacking

Col. Harold W. Glattly, medical chief of the Second Army headquartered at Fort Meade, Md., said yesterday that 10 medical corps reservists — though none from the District—have volunteered in two weeks, but not one draft-status doctor.

The doctor-draft law was aimed principally at several thousand physicians trained at Government expense during World War II, but who saw little or no military service. Pentagon officials had expressed the view that the mere passage of the legislation would bring a flood of volunteers, and make the draft unnecessary.

Now, however, military authorities are not so sure. There are no national figures available of volunteers among the draft-liable doctors, but the feeling is that the response has been very poor.

Colonel Glattly said yesterday that despite the Army's reluctance to do so, it might be necessary to call up Reserve medical officers to meet military requirements unless the doctor-draft law produces soon the needed medical manpower.

Selective Service headquarters here is working out a plan for registering the draft-liable doctors. Announcement of a registration date is expected any day now.

Economic Experts See World Dollar Deficits Shifting

GENEVA, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—The world's dollar problem may disappear as the result of the Korean conflict and the West's rearmament drive, United Nations economic experts here said today.

They predicted, however, Europe's deficit with the United States may be replaced by deficits with other parts of the globe if the present scramble for raw materials continues. That vast deficit, which has characterized the entire world economy since the war, is now shifting in the other direction.

The U. N. economists estimated that the world is today accumulating dollar credits at the rate of two billion dollars annually. This compares with a world dollar deficit of some four billion dollars in 1949.

Soaring prices for rubber, tin and wool from Far Eastern British Commonwealth nations or territories are partly responsible.

Shaw Undergoes Kidney Operation

LUTON, England, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—George Bernard Shaw was operated on for an old kidney ailment today, but hospital authorities said he did not allow "the operation to disturb the rest of his day."

A bulletin issued tonight said the 94-year-old playwright was resting comfortably and was in high spirits. The operation was described as a minor one, but doctors said that any operation on a man of his age was bound to cause anxiety.

Marooned Airmen Rescued

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—Three American and seven Iceland airmen, stranded for days on one of the world's largest icecaps, in southern Iceland, arrived in Reykjavik today. They were guided off the glacer by a rescue team that reached them yesterday.

2 Area Veterans of Last War Reported Wounded in Action

Two area Army men—one a Marine veteran and the other a sailor during World War II—have been wounded in action in Korea.

The Marine veteran, Pfc. Clarence O. Ball, 24, son of Mrs. Sylvia Ball Washington, Shreve rd., Falls Church, sent his mother a letter on September 3 in which he said he had been wounded in the nose and shoulder.

Corpl. Cromwell

In his description of the action in which he was wounded, he said "Koreans fight very simply and come running and yelling, trying to disorganize us."

"We shot them down like flies," he added.

Ball served two years in the South Pacific with the Marine Corps during World War II. He saw action at Okinawa and later was on occupation duty in Japan. After his discharge from the Marines, he was a construction maintenance worker for a private contractor.

He enlisted in the Army last May and was sent to Korea in the middle of June, his mother said.

Ball was born at Bailey's Crossroads and went to elementary school there. He was attending Manassas Vocational School when he enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1944. He has four brothers, three of whom saw Army service during World War II, and three sisters. His father, William L. Ball, lives in Bailey's Crossroads.

Corpl. John L. Cromwell, 23, nephew of Mrs. Alice Anderson, 1416 U st. nw., was also listed as wounded on Defense Department casualty list No. 102.

Cromwell, who served in the Navy during the last war, was slightly injured on September 7, his aunt has been informed.

He was fighting with the Twenty-fifth Infantry Division.

After his discharge from the Navy in 1946, Cromwell attended Blackwell Business Colege here. He enlisted in the Army in June, 1949, and left for Korea in June this year, his aunt said. He had been stationed at Fort Dix, N. J., until he was sent to Korea.

A native of Goochland County, Va., Cromwell lived with his aunt in Washington for a number of years before enlisting in the Navy. He has two brothers and sisters and his father, Harry Cromwell, lives in Goochland County.

Forty-nine Washington area men have been wounded in Korea to date. Fourteen have been kiled, three injured and 19 are currently missing in action.

More Reds Giving Up; Peace Hopes Rise

By O. H. P. King

TOKYO (Friday), Sept. 22 (AP).—Some sources here speculated today that several hundred North Korean soldiers who gave up the Red cause yesterday may be the vanguard of wholesale surrenders and quick peace in Korea.

Other quarters, aware of grim realities on the fighting fronts, where resistance is still stiff, hesitated to predict such a trend. The Reds hastily shifting troops to adjust for the United Nations offensive in the Inchon-Seoul sector, are fighting determinedly to hold Seoul.

Whatever may follow, almost every sector saw enemy troops toss in the towel yesterday. Defections ranged from that of a divisional Chief of Staff to 200 men of the North Korean lines, many of them boys 14 and 15 years old.

The Chief of Staff is Senior Col. Lee Hak Ku, 30, of the North Korean Thirteenth Division, highest ranking Red officer yet to surrender. Lee gave up to the United States First Cavalry Division in southeast Korea, saying he had decided Democracy was the best way of life.

The youths were among troops who surrendered in the Inchon-Kimpo-Seoul area.

Associated Press Correspondent Ben Price reported that dozens of North Koreans, including a political commissar, surrendered near Waegwan. They carried safe conduct leaflets dropped by United States planes.

Price reported 86 Red surrenders within 24 hours in the Twenty-Fourth Infantry Division's sector, and indicated good treatment of prisoners was bringing in others.

One prisoner said he gave up because to remain where he was meant certain death at the hands of advancing Americans, and if he and his companions retreated they would be shot by their own officers.

Associated Press Correspondent Relman Morin reported from the Seoul area that some 200 prisoners had been rounded up, the spirit of opposition no longer within them. Most were from "A" Company, 11th Battalion, of the North Korean 78th Regiment.

From the U. S. Second Division sector southwest of Taegu, Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton reported that belated news among North Korean troops of the U. N. landings at Inchon resulted in many surrenders. Some Red deserters switched to civilian garb and fled northward, toward their homes and families, Swinton said.

Reports all along the southeastern battlefront indicated Korean Reds only now are learning of the Inchon landing. The commissar who surrendered near Waegwan said none of his comrades knew about the drive to Seoul.

With word of increasing Red surrenders, glum predictions two weeks ago that the war would last at least until next July have given way to some optimistic forecasts of a quick foldup which might even bring peace by the end of September.

These views are widespread among American rear area troops, and are heard even among fighting men on the road leading from the newest beachhead. But they spring from hope rather than sound reasoning.

Most combat veterans know bitter fighting lies ahead.

M'Arthur Returns to Tokyo; Sees Situation 'Well in Hand'

TOKYO, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur returned in triumph from the Inchon beachhead today to plan new steps in the Allied "nutcracker" drive against the Communists in Korea.

Before leaving Korea, MacArthur paid a sentimental visit to the battleship Missouri. It was the first time he had been aboard the big battlewagon since September 2, 1945, when the Japanese surrender was signed on the Missouri's main deck.

The allied supreme commander left the military situation on the northern front "well in hand." The Marines on the left flank were advancing through Seoul, and the Seventh Army Division was thrusting south toward Suwon.

On the way back, MacArthur's new plane, a constellation named SCAP (Supreme Commander, Allied Powers), flew over the battle lines of the erupting Pusan beachhead.

MacArthur looked out of the window at the clouds of dust and smoke rising from the batlefield, where American and South Korean troops are pushing back the Communists.

Lieut. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, commander of the Pacific Fleet Marine Force, flew back with MacArthur. On the way, the supreme commander presented the Silver Star Medal to the Marine general.

MacArthur had awarded another Silver Star to Marine Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Smith just before taking off from liberated Kimpo Airport.

The Missouri, which saw its first Korean action off the East coast port of Pohang, lay off Inchon today when MacArthur went aboard. The "Big Mo" was brought "around the horn" to lend the support of big guns to the troops advancing from the Inchon beachhead.

Before leaving the Missouri, the general signed the ship's guest book. Beside his name, he wrote, "Once Again."

Sabotage of Plants Feared If War Comes

NEW YORK, Sept. 21 (AP).—A munitions Board officer said today that if war comes "we may expect enemy organized sabotage units to cause major damage to important war resources just before the outbreak of hostilities."

Maj. Gen. Jerry V. Mattjka, acting director of production management for the Munitions Board at Washington, called upon industry to take advance security measures far more effective than the country ever has had before.

"A high industrial security standard at the outbreak of war may well be the decisive factor in preventing the loss of the war," Matejka said.

His statements were made in a speech prepared for the National Industrial Conference Board, a nonprofit industrial and business research group.

Matejka said that after the outbreak of war, we may expect intermittent dislocation of operations by sabotage and "incitement of labor troubles."

Program of Board

He said the Munitions Board is asking industrial companies, in plants where the board is actively concerned, to do these things:

(1) Review the plant's World War II security program (2) immediately revise and reinstate as many World War 11 protective measures as management believes are warranted, and (3) complete additional plans to bring the plant security program to the full World War II level in case of an emergency.

As a fourth step, Matejka said the companies are being told, that: "Allowance should be made for the fact that there is more likelihood of subversive activities today than in World War II and that we face a new hazard due to the fact that the USSR has effected an atomic explosion."

[The so-called Communist control bill, passed by Congress on Wednesday, provides a $5000 fine, or imprisonment up to one year, or both, for violation of any security order issued by the Secretary of Defense or any military commander he may designate.

This applies to military or naval installations, waterfront facilities, vessels, harbors and any other places subject to the administration of the Department of Defense.

Additional language which would specifically extend these provisions to any places designated by the President as defense plants was eliminated from the final bill.—Editor's Note.]

Manpower Needs Important

Matejka spoke mainly on security problems but also touched on manpower. And he put much weight on industrial manpower needs.

He said the Defense Department realizes that "we must minimize our take of military manpower, so that industry will have enough people to do its job . . . we know that a high-class screening job on critical wartime skills will have to be done."

He said the Munitions Board, working with the National Security Resources Board, is attempting to achieve "a workable military-industrial balance by shaping requirements to the capabilities of the industrial economy."

'Misquoted,' Says Fellers Of Bob Allen

NEW YORK, Sept. 21 (AP).—Republican National Chairman Guy Gabrielson telegraphed Gov. Thomas E. Dewey last night that he would investigate a purported remark by Bonner F. Fellers, committee attache, that "Hitler did Germany a world of good."

Gabrielson's telegram, sent from Washington, was in reply to a demand by Dewey for Fellers' ouster from the committee if he made the remark.

"I join in deploring and disavowing any praise of Hitler as reflecting any opinion of the Republican Party," Gabrielson said.

Contacted in Columbus, Ohio, where he was addressing the State GOP convention, Fellers told a reporter:

"I was misquoted entirely."

Fellers declined further comment, saying he wanted to study the Dewey statement. He promised to issue a statement of his own later.

Robert S. Allen's syndicated newspaper column from Washington reported yesterday that Fellers made the remark to a group of six anti-Nazi Germans touring the United States.

The Allen column quoted Fellers as telling the Germans at GOP National headquarters in Washington:

"I believe Hitler did Germany a world of good. Sure, he did a few bad things. But it was Hitler who rehabilitated the Germans. The only thing wrong with Hitler was that he went too far. He got the world involved in a war."

The German group is in this country studying democratic institutions and methods.

Fellers, 54, is a retired brigadier general. He was psychological warfare officer on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff from 1944 to 1946.

St. Therese Letter To Be Shown in Public First Time

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Sept. 21 (NYHT).—An original letter by St. Therese, known to Roman Catholics as the Little Flower of Jesus, has been released from the Carmelite convent in Lisieux, France, and sent to the United States as a gift.

When the 72-word letter is shown Sunday afternoon at St. Cecilia's Carmelite Church here, it will be the first time a missive in St. Therese's handwriting has been publicly displayed in the world.

All the original letters of St. Therese of which the church has knowledge are in the archives at the Lisieux convent, where the Little Flower was a cloistered nun from the time she was 16 until she died in 1897 at the age of 24. Only scholars and church authorities are permitted to study the letters.

The single letter was sent to the Rev. Albert H. Dolan, founder of the Society of the Little Flower, by the two surviving sisters of St. Therese, both of whom are nuns at the French convent.

Troops Main Targets of Fliers

TOKYO, Friday, Sept. 22 (AP).—Allied warplanes, credited with killing more than 900 enemy troops yesterday, swarmed out again today in full force for renewed attacks on moving North Korean columns.

The planes were favored with good weather for the third day in a row in their new campaign which provides constant fighter cover for advancing Allied forces along the battlefronts.

An air release, reporting heavy casualties among enemy ground forces, underscored a report Thursday by Maj. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, commander of the Fifth Air Force. Partridge said the new cover system was working "very well" and would be continued.

Thursday's Air Force summary said a new record of 702 sorties were flown Wednesday. It reported 600 Reds were killed in a single strafing attack on North Koreans retreating from the southeastern front.

Today's air summary said the more than 900 enemy troops killed Thursday were along the battleline and roads of retreat. Vehicles, tanks, military buildings and road and rail communications all came under heavy attack.

The summary did not give the number of sorties, or individual flights, Thursday but called it a "near record."

Bombers, finding industrial targets scarce, likewise dumped their deadly loads on enemy personnel. Three training camps near the North Korean capital, Pyongyang, and another at Mirin were hit by B-29s.

Fighters and bombers ranged the length of the peninsula. Fifth Air Force B-26 light bombers, F-80 jets and F-51 fighter-bombers flew more than 400 sorties in close support of ground troops. Carrier-based U. S. Navy and Marine planes swept across the Inchon-Seoul area for the seventh consecutive day.

The Royal Australian Air Force also set a new record of 44 Mustang missions.

Materiel and industrial centers were not ignored, however. Fifteen warehouses at Sukchon, in North Korea, were blasted, and rail lines were cut in many places between Sonchon and Taeju. A bridge was hit at Pyongyang. Fifth Air Force planes destroyed a Russian-built Yak fighter plane, six tanks, 15 other vehicles and a bridge.

Military targets also were hit at Taejon, Kumchon, Okchon, Yongchung, Iri, Kochang and Sinwan. Tunnels supply dumps, ammunition areas and airports at Pyongyang, Konan and Onjon were attacked.

United States Navy planes destroyed three locomotives and damaged two on the railroad between Sariwon and Kaesong. A direct bomb hit blew off the mouth of a tunnel at Sinmak, with a train inside.

Berlin Troops Dig in Across Dispute Zone

BERLIN, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—British and Russian troops with rifles and machine guns dug in tonight on opposite sides of a disputed border area in Berlin's western outskirts after two days of negotiations failed to settle the affair.

As huge Kleig lights shone on the area, between Potsdam and the Briitsh-operated Gatow airfield, Soviet tanks were reported jockeying through the neighboring woods.

The British commandant, Maj. Gen. Geoffrey K. Bourne, dispatched a stiff protest to Soviet Commissioner Sergei A. Dengin, demanding withdrawal of the Russian troops from the road block they set up just inside the British sector yesterday.

Meawhile the Russians released two American military policemen seized at gunpoint yesterday near the American-Soviet zonal border. The two said they were held 13 hours without food or water.

Communist police announced tonight that four of their women police who had been under arrest in West Berlin were set free and as a result four West German police also were released. The West Germans still hold at least 51 Russian sector police while the East Germans kept at least 22 West German police in custody.

As night closed, the disputed border area stood out like a spotlighted stage.

British Tommies dug foxholes in the woods and posted sentries along the road nearby. A few yards away grim Russian soldiers did the same thing.

The Russians cut off electric power from their zone to West Berlin at midnight last night, but officials reported that this failed to disrupt electricity in any part of the city. Seven generators in western Berlin were able to meet the requirements.

However, if the cut is continued into the winter some rationing may be necessary.

The two American military policemen—Corpl. Peter J. McWeeney of Newark, N. J., and Pfc. Kenneth I. Christman, 20, of Huntington, Ind.—were freed after spending a night under questioning at a Russian military post near Potsdam.

McWeeney said that after the initial encounter, when a Russian lieutenant put a loaded gun against Christman's head and told him to move out of the driver's seat, the Russians were not "rough."

"But they kept shouting," he said. "We couldn't understand what they were shouting. They seemed to be angry about something—I don't know what."

Six of the Communist police—the ones whose seizure in the American zone Monday set off a series of arrests and counter-arrests—are scheduled to be tried before a United States court Friday.

They were charged with wearing para-military uniforms and entering the American sector with firearms.

Red Viet Minh Forces Mass on French Outpost

SAIGON, Indo-China, Sept. 21 (AP).—Communist-led Viet Minh forces are massing near the western anchor of the French defense line near the Chinese frontier, menacing an outpost astride the invasion route southward, a military spokesman said tonight.

The forces of Moscow-trained Ho Chih Minh are deployed east of Laokay, 150 miles north of Hanoi. Directly threatened are two of Laokay's perimeter outposts.

The invasion route parallels the railroad that runs from Kunming, in Communist China's Yunnan Province, to Haiphong on the east coast of Indo-China. The frontier post is isolated now and is supplied entirely by air.

The French military spokesmen said pressure has eased elsewhere along the frontier with Red China. Yesterday French sources said Communist forces occupying Dongkhe has evacuated it and withdrawn to posts inside Red China, but official French military spokesmen said they had no official confirmation of this.

[The United Press quoted a spokesman for the French army as saying previous reports that Dongkhe had been retaken by the French were "premature."]

A French communique has reported, however, a general movement of Viet Minh troops from the Dongkhe area toward the China frontier.

Military circles here, although never fully ruling out the possibility, minimize the likelihood of a Chinese Communist invasion of Indo-China.

15-Room House Put Up For Sale by Robeson

ENFIELD, Conn., Sept. 21—(U.P.). Paul Robeson put his 15-room house up for sale today.

The Negro baritone's wife said: "We've found obstacles we can't overcome. Singing is Paul's bread and butter and he's unable to get a hall in this country. He has hundreds of offers for concerts in Europe but the State Department won't grant him a passport."

Mrs. Robeson said they plan to build a smaller house in South Norwalk, Conn., so they can commute to New York.

Allies to Resist Berlin Reds, McCloy Warns

FRANKFURT, Germany, Sept. 21 (AP).—American High Commissioner John J. McCloy made plain today that the Western Allies will fight if the Communists stage a Korea-type attack on Western Germany with the East German people's police.

McCloy was asked if the Allied foreign ministers' pledge to treat any attack against West Germany or Berlin as an attack upon themselves covered the use of the Russian-trained volkspolizei or people's police.

"From whatever source," McCloy replied.

Just back from New York, where he took part in the foreign ministers conference, McCloy hinted at a news conference that the West German government might be permitted to use the new mobile police forces to combat Communist subversion as fast as they can be organized.

Adenauer Bans Speeches During Allied Talks

BONN, Germany, Sept. 21 (AP). Chancellor Konrad Adenauer today warned his Cabinet ministers to avoid foreign affairs speeches while he negotiates with the Allied high commissioners here beginning on Saturday.

Adenauer wants to present the strongest possible front for the talks—the first with the commissioners since the Big Three Foreign Ministers in New York approved decisions giving West Germany greater sovereignty.

Today Adenauer fought off two attacks on his government. He persuaded Parliament to drop a motion of nonconfidence in his Finance Minister, Dr. Fritz Schaeffer, saying he was needed in the discussions with the high commissioners.

Adenauer also defended his Cabinet members against Socialist charges that they had made indiscreet speeches that damaged the position of the West German government in the New York talks.

Marines, Reds Battle Fiercely for Seoul

They crashed through with bayonets under Marine air cover and severed the main railroad and highway leading south from Seoul.

Earlier field dispatches said other Marines cut into Seoul's northern outskirts at 6 p. m. Wednesday (5 a. m. Wednesday EDT), but Lambert's dispatch shortly before midnight Thursday indicated they were not in the city proper.

Lambert said a Marine advance force which had crossed the Han River northwest of Seoul was having difficulty moving up ammunition and supplies but had advanced to within two and one-half miles of the city's center. This unit was within sight of Seoul's few high buildings and radio antenna. The radio, incidentally, abruptly went off the air Thursday night in the middle of a Communist program.

A North Korean force estimated at between 600 and 1000 men crossed the Han on the northern flank of the Allies' Inchon beachhead and fired a few shells into Kimpo airfield, the Korean end of a busy American airlift for priority supplies for the Seoul fighting front.

South Koreans battled the invaders, killed at least 150 and captured as many more. The prisoners said their mission was to retake Kimpo airfield, 15 miles northwest of Seoul.

British Royal Marines, an American special service unit and newly landed United States Marines were rushed to a point northwest of the field to check any concerted Red drive.

Marines commanded by Col. Lewis (Chesty) Puller, of Saluda, Va., in the Yongdungpo action cut the main railroad and highway before they hacked their way through with bayonets.

Marine airmen aided the drive by setting Yongdungpo afire with bombs.

Lieut. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., Pacific Fleet Marine Force commander, said his Marines may get into Seoul proper Friday but cautioned that it would be at least a week before the place could be called secure.

Shepherd and Army officers who returned to Tokyo with General MacArthur Thursday night said about 3,000 Reds were entrenched on South mountain, a hill rising in the center of Seoul.

Clean Sweep for Artillery Fire

The high point gives the Communists a commanding sweep of the city for artillery fire.

Shepherd said additional Marine units landed Thursday at Inchon and were rushing to the front.

"I don't think the Communists will give up," he said. "They've got too much at stake.

"Anyway, we're across the Han River, and nobody is going to drive us out of those positions."

Shepherd said the Marines who took Kimpo Airfield, 15 miles northwest of Seoul, were "still cleaning out snipers."

Whereabouts of a Red mystery column which the U. S. Tenth Corps reported moving south toward Seoul was confused.

Tactical air reconnaissance said there was considerable troop movement toward Seoul.

Originated Near

The mystery column, first said to have originated at Antung on the Korea-Manchuria border, actually was originally sighted about 20 miles south of Antung. It later was reported near Kaesong, 2 miles south of the Thirty-eighth Parallel dividing North and South Korea.

An Army spokesman in Washington said no evidence had been received there of such a column of reinforcements moving south toward Seoul.

The column reportedly contained 40 tanks and 200 other vehicles.

Authorities in Washington expressed belief that the reported column might have been confused with one detected shortly after the American landing at Inchon. That column was attacked by United States planes and dispersed.

The United States Army's Seventh Division was located 8 miles south of Seoul Thursday, fighting for the last ridge west of the Seoul-Suwon highway.

The job of the Seventh Division is to swing around the southern end of Seoul and cut off the Reds' approaches from the southeast.

Entrapment of 5000 Reds by the U. S. First Cavalry Division was the standout development on the old southeast perimeter.

On that front, from the east coast area westward and then south to the sea, this was the situation:

The Korean Republic's Eighth Division rolled forward nearly 6 miles and occupied Kusan, 20 miles north of Yongchon.

Kusan represented the northernmost thrust of the Allied forces since they began a general offensive September 15. The village is 34 miles northeast of the big Allied communications center of Taegu.

The United States Twenty-fourth Division won a strategic hill over a railway tunnel near Waegwan and captured nine Red tanks and 20 antitank guns.

First Cavalry Division foot troopers and South Koreans surrounded 5000 members of the North Korean Third and Thirteenth Divisions, northeast of Waegwan.

Waegwan is in the northwest corner of the Allied perimeter, 140 air miles southeast of Seoul.

If the trapped Reds can be contained or wiped out, the path is open for an Allied advance up the Kumchon-Taejon-Chonan-Suwon rail and highway towards Seoul—the best route to the capital.

The First Cavalry commander, Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, said of the trapped Reds: "We've got them now. We have troops all around them."

The Chief of Staff of the North Korean Thirteenth Division, Col. Lee Hak Ku, 30, surrendered to American forces earlier. The officer, highest ranking Red yet to give up, said he had been studying democracy recently and had come to the conclusion that it was the best way of life.

The British Twenty-seventh Brigade crossed to the west bank of the Naktong River, unopposed and in daylight, to reinforce American forces already across.

United States Second Division troops in their west-of-the Naktong bridgeheads punched out a 3-mile gain westward along the south bank of the Hwang River, a Naktong tributary.

Other Second Division Infantry 13 miles farther south got within a half-mile of the town of Sinban, 3 miles west of the Naktong, then had to pull back to higher ground for the night.

On the extreme south, United States Twenty-fifth Division Infantry rolled 3 to 5 miles westward Thursday and expressed belief they would take Chinju in daylight Friday.

Korea Will Decide Fate Of U. N., Romulo Says

NEW YORK, Sept. 21 (U.P.)—Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, retiring president of the U. N. General Assembly, tonight said that the United Nations "will never be the same again" after Korea.

"Either it will emerge from the crisis stronger, more elective and more highly respected or it will be reduced to futility and impotence and will rapidly wither on the vine," said Romulo, Philippines Foreign Affairs Secretary, at a dinner given by the City of New York honoring him and Assembly delegates.

Gov. Thomas E. Demey of New York also spoke, urging the delegates to support Secretary of State Dean Acheson's proposal for a standing U. N. Army.

Army Rewards Employe For New Engine Device

Donald H. Smith, civilian employe of the Army Engineer Research and Development laboratories, Fort Belvoir, was awarded a $75 prize yesterday for design of a snowproof metal radiator cover for internal combustion engines.

Col. O. B. Beasley, commanding officer at the laboratories, said Smith's design had proved more practicable than earlier devices, and had saved the Government $2000 to date.

Non-Soviets See Possible Korean Peace Move

Formosa and on the Manchurian border—and even on these issues the sparks were less fiery than usual.

In this atmosphere, and with Allied troops pushing close to the Thirty-eighth Parallel, the American delegation started to compare notes with its Indian, British, Canadian and other friends about what to do next.

Technically Gen. Douglas MacArthur is free to send his ground troops north of the Thirty-eighth Parallel if he needs to do so as part of his tactical operations.

But there is a strong feeling here, shared by some in the American delegation, that the U. N. Assembly ought to express itself on this subject before the border is crossed.

Other questions about the immediate future of Korea need urgntly to be answered by the Assembly.

What kind of authority, for example, should be set up in the enemy territory, either during the fighting or afterwards?

Should South Korean troops be used in the North? How quickly should a U. N. commission be sent in to supervise Korea-wide elections, and how should such a commission be made up? And what if the Soviet Union suddenly proposes a cease-fire, leaving the aggressor government intact, north of the Thirty-eighth Parallel?

Comprehensive Move Possible

Unless there is deep disagreement among the Allies, it would be no surprise to see one of the non-Soviet governments propose a comprehensive resolution soon, and ask for its discussion quickly as a matter of urgency. By a decision of the steering committee today, Assembly members have until October 4 to propose new subjects for discussion, but October 4 is two weeks off, and the Allied troops may reach the old borderline before then.

One of today's Assembly speakers warned against any talk of peace with the North Koreans or their sponsors at least until the Thirty-eighth Parallel had been reached. The speaker was Ambassador Sir Carl Berendsen of New Zealand, whose country has two of its warships fighting with MacArthur's naval forces.

"We must see this thing through to the end," Berendsen insisted. "There must be no appeasement of the evildoer, no temporizing with the international criminal, no weakening of our present high resolve by well-meant but dangerous and impracticable proposals to talk things over with those who are flaunting the will of mankind.

Malik Drops a Hint

"Having entered into arms against this gross infringement of international law and order, we cannot afford to enter into discussions or negotiations of any kind whatsoever with the international criminal until he is back whence he came."

Earlier today Malik dropped a hint that sounded as if the Russians wanted to start just such discussions, and with the United States alone. The hint came during a brief debate in the steering committee over letting the Assembly discuss the Soviet failure to repatriate German prisoners.

Malik objected that this concerned relations with an enemy, and therefore was not proper for Assembly debate. Ambassador Warren R. Austin, for the United States, reminded him that the Assembly had discussed the Berlin crisis in 1948, although this involved Germany.

Not Settled By U.N.

But, Malik replied, the Berlin question had been settled by direct negotiations, and not in or by the United Nations. This was a reference to Malik's secret talks with Ambassador Philip C. Jessup, which led to the lifting of the Berlin blockade early last year.

The Soviet government has never recognized the Korea crisis as a United Nations concern; it has always pretended that it was a civil war within Korea, and a diplomatic quarrel between itself and the United States.

To those who can detect Soviet hints—and the whole Assembly was trying to do so today—this may have meant that the Russians wanted new Malik-Jessup conversations to end the Korean war. Jessup is still in New York, although not a member of the Assembly delegation. He busied himself at the Waldorf-Astoria today with the script of a television program on which he will appear Sunday. If Malik's superiors wanted him to start such talks, Jessup is ready for them.

Honor to Dead in Korea Refused by Soviet Bloc

NEW YORK, Sept. 21 (U.P.)—Soviet bloc delegates sat stonily today when the rest of the General Assembly stood for a minute's silence in honor of United Nations soldiers who have fallen in Korea.

The surprise request for the tribute was made by Guatemalan Foreign Minister Ismael Gonzalez Arevalo. First he called for applause for the U. N. forces. The Soviet bloc refused to join. Then he asked for the rising tribute.

Edvard Kardelj, Yugoslav delegate, also kept his seat. He explained later that he had done so "in abstention."

just told the Senators what happened."

Earlier, President Truman was questioned at his news conference about Marshall disclaiming personal responsibility for the policy. The President replied that Marshall was not Secretary of State at the time, but a special presidential envoy, representing him and the State Department. Mr. Truman added that Marshall had his instructions and that they were in writing.

The new Defense chief was sworn into office by Felix Larkin, Department of Defense general counsel, in the presence of only five other persons. They included: retiring Deputy Secretary Stephen Early, Acting Public Relations Chief Osgood Roberts, Maj. Clarence J. George, Marshall's aide, and an official Army photographer, Master Sergt. Vernon E. Durapau, who photographed the scene.

Marshall said he would continue for the present as president of the American Red Cross in addition to his new job.

Gen. Marshall To See Foreign Defense Chiefs

NEW YORK, Sept. 21 (NYHT). Emphasizing the need for speed in building up west European defense forces, the Defense Ministers of both Great Britain and France arrived here today.

Both were summoned by their Foreign Ministers, who have been attending Big Three and North Atlantic Council sessions at which rearmament of western Europe was the prime topic. They will confer here Friday with Gen. George C. Marshall, new United States Secretary of Defense.

Strong and sound organization and adequate defense preparations can avert war, British Defense Minister Emmanuel Shinwell said. He went immediately from Idlewild Airport to the Waldorf-Astoria for a luncheon conference with British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin.

Arriving on another plane, French Defense Minister Jules Moch declared France is better prepared to defend itself now than in 1939, and "we will be prepared when American divisions are there." President Truman has announced that additional United States divisions will be sent to Europe.

"My business is to make a big French army on the west front in Germany to stop the Russians in the east in the event of aggression," Moch said. He was accompanied by Gen. Clement Blanc, French army chief of staff. Both conferred with French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

Referring to the need for an integrated western army, the principle on which both the Big Three and the North Atlantic Council are agreed, Shinwell said:

"It's got to be done quickly, with no delay. It's absolutely required, and we've got to take no chances."

Red Bill Veto Faces Defeat, Leaders Agree

By Jack Steele
NYNT News Service

President Truman passed along the word yesterday to Democratic leaders of Congress that he would veto the Communist control bill which cleared the House and Senate by top-heavy margins Wednesday.

Mr. Truman is expected to announce his decision today with a message bitterly denouncing the bill, which would compel all Communists and Communist organizations to register with the Justice Department and ban Communists from Government and defense plant jobs.

Congress is virtually certain to over-ride the veto as one of its final actions before recessing until after the November 7 elections. The handful of Senators and Representatives who stood with the President in opposing the bill conceded yesterday they had no hope of mustering enough votes to sustain a veto.

The big omnibus bill—the most sweeping antisubversive legislation passed by Congress since the Alien and Sedition acts of 1798—reached the White House yesterday afternoon.

Budget Bureau Review

As is customary, the bill was passed along to the budget bureau for a final once-over and technically will not reach the President until today.

A Budget Bureau spokesman indicated the Justice and Defense Departments had already prepared reports on the bill which the President might incorporate in his message.

"The skids are greased for the bill," this spokesman added prophetically.

Senator Lucas again promised the Senate that Congress would not quit until the President acted on the bill, adding: "If he's going to veto it, I hope he returns it today or tomorrow."

As he spoke, the engrossed copy of the bill was delivered by a House messenger for the signature of Vice President Barkley, who must sign all legislation as presiding officer of the Senate.

Barkley Signs Hurriedly

Philip Murray, president of the CIO, meanwhile, urged Mr. Truman in a letter to veto the bill, which he charged would repress "honest and non-Communist political dissent" and might be used to "hamper legitimate trade-union activity."

"Many of its provisions are of dubious constitutionality," Murray wrote. "Its treatment of aliens is inhumane and violates our conceptions of fair play."

Briton Warns On Panic Law To Balk Reds

LONDON, Sept. 21 (U.P.)—Britain must not push through "panic legislation" to outlaw the Communist Party despite evidence of growing Red infiltration in labor unions and elsewhere Britain's top legal authority said tonight.

Sir Hartley Shawcross, Attoney General told a political rally at Cam that "robust public opinion" is the best way to meet any fifth-column threat.

Minister of Labor George Isaacs told the recent Commons session that there was evidence of a deliberate plot to undermine the nation's industrial war effort by agents just returned from a Cominform meeting in Warsaw. He hinted at legislation to meet the threat.

The heads of all London high schools were called in this week for a secret conference on combatting Communist propaganda among school children. That was stirred up by the discovery that one 17-year-old girl was collecting "peace petition" signatures among her classmates.

The Admiralty confirmed that it was investigating what was either an accident or a case of sabotage aboard the submarine Sirdar, where a main valve was found to have been tampered with. It was the 14th reported case of possible sabotage since the Korean war.

Awaits Aid Near North Pole

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MERCY FLIGHT—Charles Leroy Havens, 23, is the object of the longest mercy flight in the history of Canadian Aviation. The 2150-mile flight will terminate at Eureka Sound, 680 miles south of the North Pole, where Havens is attached to a weather station. Havens, seriously ill from blood poisoning, will be flown out if the rescue plane can land, otherwise a doctor aboard will parachute in to attend him

USSR Reveals Plans for More Dams

MOSCOW, Sept. 21 (AP).—Soviet newspapers announced today more government plans to build large hydroelectric and irrigation projects, adding thousands of kilowatts to Russia's electrical production and reclaiming millions of acres in the Crimea and Asian desert regions.

The newest announcements envision construction of a second dam on the lower reaches of the Dnepr River, below the huge Dnepr dam — presently Russia's biggest—which was built in the early '30s.

This new project also will divert waters of the Dnepr into an extensive system of canals to irrigate the fertile but arid southern Ukrainian steppe and on into northern Crimea all the way to the Kerch Peninsula, transforming about eight million cares of land for wheat and cotton.

Also planned, according to the newspapers, is an irrigation project carrying waters of the Amu Darya River hundreds of miles through the desolate central Asian desert all the way to the Caspian Sea.

The projects, like two other similar ones announced earlier this month, are to start next year.

The new dam, to be built at Kakhovka, near the Dnepr's outlet to the Black Sea, is to have a 250,000 kilowatt production capacity—about one half that of the original Dnepr Dam. The government announced last month it would build within five years a huge power dam on the Volga River, bigger than the American Grand Coulee—now the world's biggest—and much bigger than the original Dnepr Dam. Another dam, primarily for irrigation purposes, is to be built on the Volga near Stalingrad.

Tito Sees Korea Halting Stalin's March

BELGRADE, Sept. 21 (U.P.)—Premier Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia believes that the quick and effective action of American forces in Korea has had a profound effect on Soviet foreign policy and will help stop further Russian "aggression."

Tito expressed that view to four American congressmen last night and suggested that United Nations forces stop at the Thirty-eighth Parallel and allow the Korean people a chance to vote freely on their unity.

Senators Owen Brewster (R., Me.), Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) and Representatives Harold Cooley (D., N. C.) and W. R. Poage (D., Tex.) were entertained by Tito at a four-hour banquet. They said their talk with Tito was "a straight from the shoulder session in which we learned a lot."

Tito, according to Brewster, agreed that the fight today is not between the ideologies of communism and capitalism, but that the issue is between "slavery and liberty"—between the right of self-determination and complete domination.

The congressmen said Tito appeared gratified by the latest American advances in Korea and believes they have made a great impression on the Soviet Politburo and on Premier Josef Stalin in particular.

When asked about the continued imprisonment of Archbishop Stepinac, Tito was said to have replied that, although he might gain much support in the United States by releasing the Catholic primate, the action would be resented by millions of Serbs. He said the Serbs hold Stepinac responsible for wartime collaboration

Allied Colonel Shot for Blocking Retreat

SOMEWHERE IN SOUTH KOREA, Sept. 21 (AP).—A South Korean Army colonel was executed by a firing squad today after a court-martial convicted him of negligence leading to large losses of life and property.

He was Col. Choi Chang Sik, former chief of the South Korean Army Engineer Corps. His execution was announced by Col. Yang Chung Soo, Republic of Korea Judge Advocate.

Colonel Choi was convicted of cutting a South Korean retreat by ordering the dynamiting of a rail and vehicle bridge over the Han River south of Seoul June 28, three days after the Reds invaded South Korea.

The prosecution charged the bridge was blown up in the faces of South Korean troops falling back before the Reds.

Many South Korean soldiers were killed and huge quantities of arms, ammunition and supplies were isolated by the blast. Two American correspondents were injured.

Swedish Red Cross Staff Aiding Wounded

TOKYO Sept. 21 (U.P.).—Doctors and nurses of the Swedish Red Cross contingent to the United Nations forces in Korea are working at an American evacuation hospital pending establishment of their own facilities and arrival of additional personnel and equipment, general headquarters said today.

The Swedish Red Cross hospital is being prepared at Pusan where buildings of the former Pusan Commercial School are being renovated.

Adm. Halsey, Cursed, Resented Term 'Old'

ABOARD BATTLESHIP MISSOURI off Inchon, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's return visit to this "Japanese surrender" ship today reminded him of a story about Fleet Adm. William F. (Bull) Halsey, whom he last saw aboard the Missouri.

MacArthur told of an occasion when a small boat crew, with a "very important person" to visit the admiral, had difficulty bringing their craft alongside his ship.

Halsey leaned over the side of the ship and told them in no uncertain terms to hurry up. A sailor, speaking louder than he realized, asked:

"Who does that pot-bellied old SOB think he's giving orders to?"

been discussed in all parts of the Government, but that no conclusion had been arrived at as yet.

In reply to other questions, the President said that he had no plans for campaigning this fall; that he thought the Foreign Ministers had been making great progress in New York; that he couldn't say what he would do with the anti-Communist bill until it reached him, and that he was considering Sarah Hughes of Texas, among others, for the Federal Trade Commission.

Before the Harriman speech was brought up, a reporter asked Mr. Truman if he would comment on "certain Democratic Senators whose record on foreign affairs voting would equal or surpass that of Senator Taft."

Mr. Truman said he thought that there were very few such Democrats. He added that there were more Republicans who voted right than Democrats who voted wrong, so that it was still a bipartisan foreign policy.

Colleagues Support Taft

Harriman, who is Special Assistant to the President, went after Taft in a speech before the American Federation of Labor convention in Houston, Tex., on Tuesday. He cited Taft's votes on Marshall Plan appropriations, the North Atlantic Pact and arms-aid, and charged that the Ohioan had thus furthered "Communist objectives."

Mr. Truman's indorsement of Harriman's speech yesterday brought more angry retorts from Taft's colleagues in Congress.

"If Mr. Truman and Mr. Harriman keep on, particularly Mr. Harriman, they'll elect Bob Taft with the jawbone of an ass," said Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.). "They're not interested in bipartisan foreign policy, only victory at the polls."

Senator Hendrickson (R., N. J.), said Harriman's statement was "ridiculous" and that the President was "stupid to indorse it."

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.), said that Mr. Truman was "mimicking Malik" and other Russian propagandists by trying to divert attention from "the crisis we are in."

At the end of yesterday's news conference, Mr. Truman greeted a group of foreign journalists who were onlookers at what he called the greatest show in Washington.

Barrett Seeks 312 Policemen approved for the five-day week, would increase the authorized strength of the department's uniformed force to 2600 Barrett said. "This is a conservative estimate of the department's needs," he added.

In addition to asking for 312 for 18 additional clerical workers. This would beest the department's payroll by $1,017,753. The new positions sought include:

(1) Five inspectors—One would be in chargs of the department from 4 p. m. to midnight, another from midnight to 8 a. m. A third would serve as assistant chief of detectives, another as civil defense liaison officer, and a fifth would relieve when other inspectors are on leave.

(2) Six captains—Two would relieve precinct captains on days off. The others would command the Pawn Inspector's Office, Accident Investigation Unit, Vice Squad and Statistical Bureau.

(3) Twelve lieutenants—Two for supervisory duty, two at the Harbor Precinct so as to have one on duty at all times, one at the Municipal Garage and Repair Shop to supervise care of the department's 250 vehicles, three for the lieutenant's desk in the Detective Bureau. The others would command the Identification Bureau, Fugitive, Sex and Safe Squads.

(4) Two sergeants in the Communications and Records Bureau. This would merely establish in the budget jobs approved by the Commissioners several years ago, Barrett said.

(5) Sixty-two corporals—Barrett wants corporals instead of privates for station clerks because their duties are "more complex and carry considerably more responsibility" than those of the average private. This accounts for 60 corporals. The other two are for the Communications and Records Bureau where two men are in a position similar to that of the sergeants.

(6) Two hundred twenty-five privates, sought to bring up to proper strength a department that Barrett said "has been understaffed for many years."

$140,000 to Equip Men

Eight of clerical assistants would be assigned to the new police reserve corps. The other 10 would go to various offices at headquarters.

In addition to the payroll costs involved, $140,400 would be needed to buy uniforms and pistols for the 312 new policemen, Barrett estimated.

Other items in the budget requests included:

$113,100 to buy additional motor vehicles and replaces old ones. This includes money to buy a 44-passenger bus to transport the riot squad and $2800 to buy a sedan for Barrett's official use (a $3500 request for such a car was refused by the Commissioners last year.)

$20,100 to buy harbor police a crash boat and a utility barge that could remove heavy objects from shallow water.

$10,000 customarily placed in the police department budget for the reception of visiting dignitaries to the city.

Police Charge Suspect in Fatal Beating

Washington police moved swiftly yesterday in the fatal beating of Frank J. McDermott, 62, of 511 71st st., Seat Pleasant, Md.

Within 10 hours, a suspect had been arrested and arragned before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Held on a murder charge in the slaying is Melvin Robinson, 28, of 1009 Lamont st. nw.

At about 4 a. m., according to police, McDermott left a party in a house in Wiley ct. ne. As he got outside, a man picked up a piece of wood from the street, struck McDermott over the head and rifled his pockets as he lay unconscious, they said.

Police said witnesses told them the assault and attempted robbery had been committed by Robinson, about 6 a. m. in the 800 block of 3d st. nw.

McDermott died of a fractured skull at Casualty Hospital at 8:50 a. m.

At 2 p. m., Robinson, who denied he had attended the party or had struck McDermott, was taken before Commissioner Lawrence. He was held without bond and his case was continued until September 27. The coroner's office ordered an inquest into the death at 11:30 a. m. today.

McDermott lived in Seat Pleasant at the home of a daughter, Mrs. L. A. Jameson. She said her father was a native of the District. The victim is survived by four other daughters, a son and eight grandchildren.

House Votes Substitute for Red Trade Rider

sentative Rankin of Mississippi on the Democratic side. The amendment cleared its real hurdle by a narrow margin when the House voted 167 to 149 to take it up as a substitute for the Wherry amendment.

Cannon, who Wednesday had received a letter from President Truman urging rejection of the Wherry amendment, termed the Senate rider "absurd and unworkable." He declared it was "the most ill-conceived, most inexpedient, most mischievous in its effect on our international relations and most menacing to world peace in my experience."

Representative Taber (R., N. Y.), speaking for the opposition, said there should be "an absolute prohibition" against exports through the Iron Curtain. The Cannon amendment, he said, would not have the positive effect he maintained was necessary.

Speaker Sam Raburn of Texas came down from the chair to plead with the House to accept the Cannon substitute. The United States, he said, "doesn't have too many friends in the world" and declared this Nation "needs friends as never before." He urged his colleagues not to "give up up what we've gained; let's not give up the friends we need so sorely."

Proponents of the Cannon amendment proposed messages to show that the Wherry approach was opposed by diplomatic and military officials and by labor leaders.

Davis, Rival of Coolidge, Shows Old Form Before Bar Group

The Washington Post

ON INJUNCTIONS—Norman C. Melvin, jr., of Baltimore, Md., receives the $2500 Ross Essay Award for his paper on the use of injunctions in labor disputes. Making the presentation was John W. Davis of New York, past president of the American Bar Association. Davis was the Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1924

A figure from the Nation's long-dead political past returned to Washington yesterday to preside over a session of the American Bar Association.

He is white-haired John W. Davis, who after reaching the heights as a lawyer, failed just short of the pinnacle in politics.

It was in 1924 that Davis, the fine orator, the World War I diplomat, the man who had turned down appointment to the Supreme Court, ran for the Presidency and lost to Calvin Coolidge.

As Davis stood at the rostrum, he was still straight in his figure, still quick in his wit. But his fine voice had lost its vigor, his walk was slower.

When the session was over, many in the audience who had known Davis "when" came forward to shake his hand.

There was a young Grafton, W. Va., lawyer who said, "You knew my father, I believe."

"How is he?" asked Davis, and the reply was that the father was no longer living.

"It is like that," replied Davis. "I hate to ask about my frineds any more because the answer so often is that they are dead."

Davis didn't want to talk about politics in this day, saying, "There is no one who knows less."

Just how old are you? someone asked Davis.

"I was born in 1873," he replied. "That was a fine vintage year. It saw many great men."

Davis heads the law firm of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Sunderland and Kiendl. He said he has no specialty in the law.

"Come up to New York and break a leg," he told a reporter. "I'll represent you if you wish."

mittee a resolution recommending an international criminal court with its first case to be prosecution of those causing the "murderous armed attacks" on the Republic of Korea.

The association's Traffic Court contest was won by Los Angeles, Denver, Evansville, Ind.; Salt Lake City, Covington, Ky.; Watertown N. Y., and Greeley, Colo. A commendation was given to Washington and other cities for continuous high standards.

The State traffic award went to New Jersey.

Maitre Andre Toulouse of the Paris bar delivered a 28-page address in French to the surprise of most of the assembly. The talk was mostly on the new civil code in his country.

"There is no better way to contribute to the establishment of peace in the world than to bring to it, with law, more of liberty and more of justice," he said.

Speaking before the Assembly, Senator J. W. deB. Farris of Canada, said that while "the stabilizing of justice by power rests with our armed forces" the tasks of establishing international justice and making justice work rests with the legal profession."

Among those elected section officers were:

Criminal Law: Arthur J. Freund, St. Louis, chairman; Gov. Earl Warren, California, vice chairman; James V. Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, secretary, and Stanley J. Tracy, Department of Justice, assistant secretary.

Patents: Jennings Bailey, jr., of Washington, chairman; George H. Willits, Detroit, vice chairman, and Frank E. Foote, Pittsburgh, secretary.

Judicial Administration: James M. Douglas, St. Louis, chairman; Judge Harold R. Medina, of New York City, vice chairman, and Leland L. Tolman, Washington, secretary.

Democrats to Give Talks

Charles Wood Van Deventer and Robert Brooks, chairman and assistant chairman, respectively, of the Democratic National Committee, will speak at the 12:30 p. m. Sunday "brunch" of the District Democratic Club in the Dupont Plaza Hotel.

Denver Judge Wins American Bar Medal

Judge Orie L. Phillips of Denver last night was awarded the American Bar Association medal "for conspicuous service to the cause of American jurisprudence."

The presentation was made at the association's annual banquet held at the Armory. More than 2850 attended the event, the final social activity of the association's seventy-third convention which concludes today. The sessions have been held jointly with The Canadian Bar Association.

In awarding the medal, ABA retiring president Harold J. Gallagher said the jurist's decisions had "the common touch" and were written for the ordinary man. Yet, said Gallagher, the decisions were made without delay.

Former New York Court of Appeals Judge Bruce Bromley, who was one of the two main speakers, told the audience how he had occasion last year to overthrow, in a decision, a doctrine which had been laid down by one of his forebears 400 years ago.

Sir Norman Birkett, a noted British jurist, delivered the other address. He said that Britain, Canada, and the United States in "standing together" provide "the surest and best hope of mankind."

In his inaugural address given at the dinner, incoming President Cody Fowler of Tampa said, "I believe that if we lose this land of opportunity by reason of the apathy of our citizens it will be because the lawyers have not fully realized and fulfilled their duty of leadership to the American

Journal Explains Rare Suicide Case

The strange case of a Bethesda, Md., mental patient who committed suicide by holding his breath and struggling was unfolded yesterday.

The medical report of the fatality of six years ago, however, was balanced by a second case history of the saving of another mental patient headed for an "embarrassing" death last fall.

Thompson Aronson

Both cases were reported in the September issue of the American Journal of Phychiatry, distributed yesterday. The authors are Drs. Samuel V. Thompson, Naval Medical Hospital psychiatrist, and Morton J. Aronson, formerly of the Bethesda hospital but now assigned to the Marine Recruitment Center, Parris Island, S. C.

The 36-year-old man who reportedly killed himself "solely by physiological means" was identified as a sailor who entered the sick list after 13 days of active naval service.

Became Violent

On his eighth day of hospitalization, the doctors reported, he became violent and "fought ceaselessly" until put in "sheet restraint."

"One hour after the onset of acute excitement," the report continued, "he suddenly inhaled deeply, extruded his tongue, clamped his teeth upon it, held his breath and struggled violently."

The report described these episodes of apnea (suspensions of breathing) as lasting one minute, and followed by another minute of breathing. After five minutes of this, the doctors reported, the patient's heart stopped beating.

The patient could not be revived, even with immediate artificial respiration and administration of stimulants, they reported. Autopsy showed a normal heart.

Highest Temperature

Drs. Thompson and Aronson noted that the saving of the second patient was considered medically important because it marked "the highest temperature elevation yet reported in a nonfatal case of 'exhaustion syndrome.'"

The "exhaustion syndrome," they pointed out, is well known to many doctors as "a source of embarassment." In its course, they said, "acutely excited psychotic patients not infrequently collapse and die." The "embarassing" part for the attending doctors comes at the autopsies, which reveal "no adequate explanation" for the deaths, they said.

Such patients, they said, build up temperatures up to 110 degrees in a few minutes to a few hours, and die. The death may come anywhere within a few minutes to eight days.

Their own patient, they reported, was admitted to their care after three days of "maniacal and grossly bizarre behavior." Though his temperature built up to 106 degrees, they reported, they were able to save him by restraints, electroshock and drugs.

Kidney Device To Aid Victims Of Soporifics

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Local victims of overdoses of barbiturate sleeping pills may be rushed to treatment with Georgetown University Hospital's "artificial kidney."

This was disclosed yesterday in announcement of a Public Health Service grant of $6588 to the Georgetown doctors in charge of the new machine.

Patients for the research which may save their lives will be obtained under "arrangement with the local police, local hospitals and physicians," it was stated.

At present, it was said by Georgetown doctors, the "artificial kidney" machine has not been used on barbiturate victims. As a temporary replacement for shut-down kidneys the machine is a "potential" lifesaver, they said.

A special technician must be trained before the clinical research project can start, the doctors said.

The "artificial kidney" machine was acquired by the Georgetown University Hospital in July. It was the fourth such model, a Kolff machine, to be installed in American hospitals. To the layman, it looks like a washing machine set into a desk.

The machine filters poison from the patient's blood by running the blood through 120 feet of "skinless frankfurter" tubing. The tubing is attached to a drum that rotates in a bath of 100 quarts of a solution similar to blood serum.

The Public Health Service grant announced yesterday was awarded to Drs. Harold Jeghers and Theodore Koppanyi of GU Hospital, who will head the research. It was only one of 155 grants totaling $4,708,766 awarded on the recommendations of PHS's National Advisory Health Council.

Other awards to research workers in the Washington area included one of $62,866 to Dr. Juan A. Montoya, Pan American Sanitary Bureau, for research on onchocerciasis, a parasitic, tumor-producing disease, and its transmitting agent the Simulium fly.

Another $12,659 was granted to Dr. Howard M. Payne, of Howard University, for drug studies in pulmonary tuberculosis. Berwind P. Kaufmann, of the Carnegie Institution of Washington was given $8600 for basic studies in irradiation changes to living cells.

Alfred D. Hershey, of the same research institution, was granted $6600 for study of growth and inheritance factors of bacterial viruses, and Dr. Joseph K. Roe, of George Washington University here, was given $3996 for research on pentoses, a class of carbohydrates.

That Lost Hour Will Return To District Area on Sunday

Sunday is Fix-Your-Clock-Day.

At 2 a. m. Sunday, the District, nearby Maryland and Virginia return to Eastern Standard Time which means recapturing the hour lost last May 4 when fast time started for the summer season.

This annual time switch causes a minor upset to transportation facilities and those who must reset thousands of clocks in public buildings.

But to the average householder, the event raises the question "How can I get the greatest emotional wallop out of this 60-minute windfall?

A spot check with same of the town's best "sack-hounds" disclosed these variations:

1. The casual type who turns his clock back an hour early Saturday evening (so you won't forget about it) and then stays up an hour later than usual bedtime, thus losing an hour's sleep.

2. The letter-of-the-law type who stays up till 2 a. m. Sunday and resets his clock and turns in knowing exactly where he stands—or lies.

3. The person who forgets all about the time switch, wakes up Sunday morning and spends an hour waiting for church to begin, and

4. The extremist who believes in complete relaxation on weekends. He goes through Sunday and reports for work Monday an hour early.

But the best jag a man can get from this Sunday's switcheroo, most sack hounds agree, is not to touch your timepiece before going to bed Saturday night; let the alarm go off as usual, roll over, and with appropriate comment, cork off for another hour.

Some early morning workers will be hard pressed for a way to beat the rap. Take soldiers and sailors here who have the 12 midnight to 4 a. m. watch. With the clock turned back at 2 a. m., he is in for a five-hour trick.

Concurrent with the return to standard time, there will be about 160 timetable changes on trains operating in and out of Union Station. Most will be paper revisions since the trains have been on standard time all summer, the Union Stationmaster explained.

Airplanes and buses reported that no major changes will take place.

Radio programs, too, will move with the clock.

Fairfax Fight

County Study Unit Stacked Bayes Says

A special study commission which which recently advocated the executive form of government for Fairfax County was "stacked" with known opponents of the county manager form, a Fairfax civic leader charged last night.

Guy M. Bayes, president of the Federation of Fairfax County Citizens' Associations, asserted at a meeting of the group in the Annandale school that all but one of the 21-member commission had been on record as opposing the county-manager plan even before they were appointed.

"Bear in mind that the commission was appointed by the Board of Supervisors who were known to oppose the county manager plan by a 5-to-1 margin," Bayes told the federation.

His comments came during a discussion of an impending referendum November 7 in which county voters will be given a chance to ballot on three forms of government. The federation already has gone on record as vigorously indorsing the county manager form which it first proposed more than a year ago.

Last night's meeting was attended by 40 delegates, representing most of the 34 organizations affiliated with the federation.

Meanwhile the Fairfax County Committee for good government declared Wednesday that advocates of the county-executive form of government are giving aid and comfort to the "real enemy" of the people of the county.

The committee, which advocates a change to county-manager government, described the "real enemy" the present unworkable and undemocratic form of government which has brought the county to the rim of ruin."

The present county supervisors have an executive secretary with no power.

The Committee for Good Government is composed of the Federation of Fairfax County Citizens' Associations, the Fairfax County chapter of the League of Women Voters and the Taxpayers' Advisory Association.

The statement, issued by Omer L. Hirst of Annandale, chairman, said the group fighting for the county executive form, known as the County League of Civic Associations, is attacking the civic groups that have worked for more than a year to achieve county reorganization, instead of working with them.

"The result," said Hirst, "can only be confusion."

Most of the individuals working for the county executive form want to get rid of the present "intolerable executive secretary form" and are not trying to "stop county manager," Hirst said his committee believes.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 21 (AP). George D. Perry today submitted to the Secretary of State the following required report on his expenses as a Republican candidate for State Representative:

Ralph Capone Is Subpenaed By Crime Unit

CHICAGO, Sept. 21 (U.P.)—Agents of the Senate crime investigating committee announced today that a subpena has been served on Ralph Capone, brother of Chicago's prohibition era racket chieftain, at his Wisconsin hideout.

Rudolph K. Halley, counsel for the committee headed by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said the subpena was served on Capone at his wilderness home at Mercer, Wis.

The Wisconsin north woods long has been the favorite under-cover hangout of Chicago gangsters. It was believed that others sought by the committee might be there.

Halley announced service of the subpena after conferring with U. S. Attorney Otto Kerner, jr. Neither would say what they discussed, but Halley said he "got a lot of help."

He said he is returning to Washington for a conference with Kefauver and understands the next committee meeting will be in Kansas City.

He indicated it is doubtful that the committee will come here after the Kansas City visit, and that it probably will go later to St. Louis.

Halley conferred yesterday with Mayor Martin Kennelly, State's Attorney John Boyle, Kerner and other law enforcement authorities. He said they promised cooperation in the investigation of Chicago crime.

Institute Faculty Backs California Professors' Fight

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 20 (U.P.)—The faculty at the Institute of Advanced Studies here has urged University of California professors to unite and fend off "encroachment" on their principles, it was disclosed today.

The University of California board of regents ousted several professors recently because they declined to sign loyalty oaths.

In a letter to the University of California's academic senate, the Institute educators said they "unanimously wish to encourage you to unite in defense of your traditional policies and principles against encroachment."

Signers included Physicist Albert Einstein; Institute Director J. Robert Oppenheimer; Director Emeritus Frank Aydelotte, and Walter W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Rockefeller Foundation.

Green Denied Jury Trial In Funds Fight

John Locke Green, Arlington County treasurer, yesterday was denied a jury trial in a case in which the Arlington School Board is trying to force him to sign a $288,591 check.

The school board wants the money to pay for a warehouse, whose purchase, Green maintains, would be illegal.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy said yesterday in Arlington Circuit Could he could not grant Green a jury trial under Virginia statutes. He set hearing on the school board's writ of mandamus against Green for 10 a. m. next Tuesday.

Green told the court the resolution which school board members cite as their authority for the purchase never existed. Lawrence Douglas, representing the school board, said a resolution authorized Colin C. McPherson, board vice chairman, to bid for the warehouse, which was sold at auction.

The three-story brick warehouse is at 1426 N. Quiney st. It would be used for administrative office space, additional shop facilities for the nearby Washington-Lee High School and storage space.

8 New Area Polio Cases Reported

Eight new cases of infantile paralysis were reported yesterday in the Greater Washington area, five in the District.

Montgomery County, Md., reported two cases, Fairfax County, Va., one.

District cases included a 10-year-old boy of the unit block of Defrees st. nw.; a 6-year-olds boy of the 700 block of 11th st. se.; a 7-year-old boy of the 2000 block of Fairlawn ave. se.; a 5-year-old girl of the 1400 block of Allison st. nw., and a 13-year-old girl of the 2200 block of 11th st. nw.

The District cases reported brought to 132 the total number of new cases recorded here this year. Last year at the same date the total stood at 68.

The sole nearby Virginia case reported yesterday was identified as an 11-year-old girl of the 300 block of East Greenway blvd., Falls Church. She was the thirty-ninth new victim of the disease in Fairfax County this year.

In Montgomery County, Md., health officials reported their two new cases yesterday included a 29-year-old woman of the 8000 block of Tahoma dr., Silver Spring, and a 32-year-old woman of the 6600 block of Strathmore st., Chevy Chase.

Nation's Polio Figures Show Sharp Rise

Polio, the unpredictable disease, increased sharply throughout the Nation last week, a period in which the seasonal increase of new cases was expected to fall.

The week's total of new cases, reported yesterday by the scorekeepers of United States Public Health Service, as 2138, a 22½ percent increase over the 1745 cases recorded the previous week.

The statisticians said the increase was the sharpest of the year. It was the 17th consecutive week to show an increase over the previous week.

In the District, new cases last week were down to seven from 10 recorded the previous week. New cases recorded this week, including five yesterday, show the disease incidence has not let up locally. Maryland and Virginia showed sharp increases in the national tables.

Last year, the worst year on record in number of cases reported, polio reached its seasonal peak in mid-August. For the four years preceding 1949, it was noted, the week corresponding to last week marked the seasons' peaks.

Cumulative total of infantile paralysis cases recorded since the start of the current "disease" year (in mid-March) was 16,236 last Saturday. At the same week's end in 1949, the "disease" year's total was 28,157.

Maryland On Epilepsy Aid Program

Because something can now be done for epileptic children, the United States Children's Bureau and Maryland have embarked on a State-wide demonstration program.

Children's Bureau officials made the program public yesterday with announcement of a $30,000 grant to the Maryland State Department of Health.

All Maryland County health departments have been asked to cooperate in the program by locating their epileptic children, referring them to central clinics, dispensing the drugs used to treat epilepsy, and cooperating with the local physicians in supervising the recommended therapy.

Both Johns Hopkins School of Medicine and the University of Maryland Medical School will cooperate in the operation of the program, it was announced.

The two medical schools will furnish specialists for two diagnostic clinics in Baltimore, to which the counties throughout the State will send the children.

Dr. Edward Davens, chief of the maternal and child health bureau of the Maryland Health Department, will direct the program.

Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, estimated that "at least 80 percent" of epileptics can lead normal, useful lives under today's diagnostic treatment services for the disorders. She said there are about 200,000 epileptic children in the United States.

The program, it was stressed, is a demonstration project to show the Nation what can be done against epilepsy.

"Because new techniques in treating epilepsy are so simple and inexpensive, compared with the treatment of polio or rheumatic fever or cerebral palsy, every epileptic child in the Nation should be treated," Miss Lenroot declared in announcing the project.

Area Traffic

Washington has long needed the type of expert traffic study that is now being made by the Regional Highway Planning Survey. The highways of the future must serve the people of the entire metropolitan area. Anything less than joint planning for that area would mean indulgence in the expensive habit of eliminating one bottleneck only to create another. It is good news, therefore, that the Federal Bureau of Public Roads, the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia have agreed to continue providing funds for completion of the area survey. The metropolitan area should have, as Samuel R. Harrison, deputy director of highways for the District, has intimated, a continuing arrangement for keeping its highway planning up to date.

Sam Zagoria has given details of the problems the experts are working out in his series of articles in The Washington Post. For the hundreds of thousands of persons who are plagued by the sluggishness of traffic every day the central fact is that the experts are finding out by scientific methods where people wish to go and are planning highways accordingly. Some drastic changes in highway patterns may be necessary, and the costs of carrying out the projects are certain to be enormous. But there is no escape from the fact that Washington is now a big city and must approach its traffic problems by big-city methods.

The Wherry Rider

The House has rejected the Wherry rider to the 17-billion-dollar Emergency Defense Appropriations bill and approved a substitute Administration proposal giving the National Security Council power to withhold aid to any nation whose trade with Russia is found to be "contrary to the security interests of the United States." It is to be hoped that the action of the House will induce the Senate to accept this substitute in place of the more rigid Wherry amendment which would cut off economic and financial aid to any foreign country exporting to Russia or her satellites arms and military materiels or articles that might be used in their manufacture.

In a letter to the chairmen of the House and Senate Appropriations Committees urging defeat of the Wherry amendment President Truman says that it would require a substantially complete embargo on trade between western and eastern Europe. To cut off such trade suddenly would, he points out, deprive ECA countries of Russian goods which are helping to build up their economic and military strength. ECA Administrator Hoffman confirms this opinion, and points out that without the supplies obtained by the West through trade with the East, an additional five billion dollars would have been required to ship an equivalent amount of supplies from dollar areas at American expense. In other words, it would cost a great deal more than it is worth to impose a sweeping ban on shipments of goods to Russia.

In our opinion, however, opponents of the Wherry amendment have exaggerated the danger of trade strangulation, since the Secretary of Defense would have the responsibility of deciding what articles might be used in the manufacture of arms or military materiel. Assuming that he would use his authority discreetly and show good judgment, it might be possible to stop the flow of military goods without resort to destructively sweeping embargoes such as President Truman and ECA Administrator Hoffman fear. Undoubtedly the Senate vote for the Wherry amendment was influenced by the fact that the Secretary of Defense would have considerable discretionary powers of determination.

The chief objection to the amendment is not so much the effect on trade as the method employed to cut off trade that would strengthen Russia's war-making potential. It leaves no room for negotiation, as the President says. Moreover, to quote Mr. Hoffman, "nations that have to be bullied into compliance with a unilateral decision on the part of the United States would not prove stanch friends when the fighting gets tough." What is required, as The Washington Post pointed out in a recent editorial, is a common policy developed in consultation with aided nations to prevent particular munitions and materiels of war from reaching Russia. In other words, the kinds of goods to be banned should be determined through friendly agreements with our allies, not dictated by us. A further objection to the amendment cited by General Bradley is that it would impose heavy administrative burdens on the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in addition to handicapping the "strenuous military efforts which we are now making to build up the collective defensive strength of western Europe."

The substitute amendment passed by the House would give the President, who heads the Security Council, the discretionary authority to decide when to halt economic aid. And he would, no doubt, regard it as a reserve power to be used only if mutually acceptable agreements with friendly trading nations could not be achieved.

Fancy Pants

Well, what did we tell you (September 1) about Mr. John L. Lewis, the Owen Glendower of our neo-industrial age? Mr. Lewis now threatens to call the spirits from the vasty deep if Senator Taft, in the course of his campaign for reelection, should dare so much as to poke his head inside an Ohio coal mine.

The question, of course, is will they come when Mr. Lewis does call for them. We should hate to think that the docility of the coal miners to Mr. Lewis' bidding has no limits, or that a limit might not be reached in a matter of this sort. When you come to think of it, there is an implicit insult to the miners in Mr. Lewis' threat. It implies first of all that the miners are not capable of listening to arguments and counterarguments on political questions, and making up their own minds about the merits of the case, as free-born citizens are expected to do. It also implies that the miners are so warped by proletarian prejudice that they are incapable of even ordinary good manners toward any member of the bourgeoisie. It smacks of that inverted snobbery characteristic of the Russian ruling classes, among whom, it is said, "proletarian ancestry" is said to be prerequisite for admission to the more exclusive schools, the more elegant society, the more expensive night clubs, the more learned professions, and the more high-salaried jobs.

Observe the premise upon which Mr. Lewis bases his assertion that anything Mr. Taft might have to say would be unfit for the ears of an honest, God-fearing coal miner, and indeed, that his very presence in a coal mine would contaminate the air. "Taft," said Mr. Lewis, "was born encased in velvet pants, and has lived to rivet an iron collar around the necks of millions of Americans." Surely, Mr. Lewis does not expect the miners to swallow that literally. The miners, we are sure, cannot be wholly ignorant of the facts of life. They must know as well as we do that Mr. Taft was no more born "encased in velvet pants" than Mr. Lewis himself was born in a black fedora hat, with a Corona-Corona projecting at a 30-degree angle from his jaws.

Thus we surmise that Mr. Lewis was speaking metaphorically. What he seems to have meant was that Mr. Taft grew up in relatively easy economic circumstances, and that his parents, had they wished to do so, could afford to dress him in velvet pants. As far as we know, they did not, for if they had it would probably have been fatal to the political ambitions of Mr. Taft's father. As you know, it is upon just such points that political destinies are decided in a great democracy. All the same, Mr. Lewis' choice of metaphor is an interesting reminder that he is himself a contemporary of the late Little Lord Fauntleroy.

But what we can't understand is why Mr. Lewis should complain about Mr. Taft or anybody else having been reared under circumstances of material comfort. After all, isn't that the whole point of the United Mine Workers of America—to fix things so that even coal miners can buy their children velvet pants or Hopalong Cassidy suits and Columbia bicycles and the Book of Knowledge? Isn't that why they pay their dues and Mr. Lewis' salary? We had certainly got that impression, but maybe we're wrong. Maybe Mr. Lewis' idea is that all this quest for material comfort is softening the moral fiber of the Nation. Still, nobody can deny that, thanks to the United Mine Workers, even the coal miners are more prosperous than they used to be in the day of the Molly Maguires. And we can't help wondering what will happen if they carry the bourgeois spirit to a point where they begin to contaminate the atmosphere of the mines themselves.

Alas, Poor Clio!

The President preferred to sidestep a question at his press conference yesterday on the concurrence or otherwise of General Marshall in the instructions which he took with him on his mission to China in 1945-46. Mr. Truman says he was a special envoy of the President, and went to China to carry out the President's written instructions. In other words, the general even in his retirement behaved like a good soldier, and the general's disclaimer at the Senate Committee the previous day of any responsibility beyond that thus stands unqualified on the historical record. It will now be added to the Republican indictment of the State Department in the November elections.

It is odd, looking over the Truman statements on China policy and General Marshall's subsequent exposition of that policy, to think of General Marshall as a robot, speaking lines after he had been cranked up. There can be no precedent for it. When a person of General Marshall's eminence is given a mission, the usual thing is to talk over the instructions, so as to find out whether the envoy believes in and approves of his mission. Only in that way can you be sure of a sincere prosecution of the mission. General Marshall's career has hitherto supported the view that this has been his practice. "Give me the facts," he is wont to say, "and I will make up my own mind." The function of State Department officials in the China matter was to dish up the facts; as hired help they could do no other.

The understanding that this newspaper has hitherto entertained about the Marshall mission was the logical one—that when civil disorder broke out in China the diplomatic experts supplied the briefs on all possible alternatives of American action. One was nonintervention (which would have been our own preference), another was all-out intervention on the side of Chiang Kai-shek, yet another was all-out intervention on the side of the Communists, and the fourth was mediation. These alternatives are said to have been given to General Marshall. He is said to have plumped for mediation. If, in spite of the Truman assurance in 1945 and 1946, he wasn't consulted, and urged mediation on the Chinese without having committed his own beliefs, then the situation is passing strange.

The way that the public has been misled both on the GOP side and on the Administration side on China is hard to stomach. The President has avoided the issue before; now he avoids it again. The Administration seems ashamed in 1950 to acknowledge what in 1945 was regarded by almost everybody in America as a noble experiment. So the buck is passed to the hired help, and the Republicans are left with more material further to tar and feather the career officials. In sympathizing with them, let us also condole with the muse of history.

"Vigilante Justice"

It is immensely reassuring that the Attorney General of the United States has spoken out against the commiphobia with which the Congress and much of the country appear to be infected. Mr. McGrath's views deserve special weight, since he heads the department of the Government charged with responsibility for internal security. He spoke on Wednesday before the General Assembly of the American Bar Association, warning against "vigilante" justice and security legislation "containing the same shrill overtones of hysteria." But his words fell, apparently, on deaf ears. The Bar Association adopted a resolution urging Congress to pass, and the President to sign, the McCarran Communist registration bill.

Mr. McGrath cannot be considered, even by the most frenzied, to be indifferent to communism or careless about the real dangers of espionage and sabotage by Communist agents. He wants statutory weapons that will enable him to deal with these dangers more effectively. But legislation that indiscriminately harasses Communists and liberals, blurring the important distinction between them, impedes rather than assists the vital job of counterintelligence. The Attorney General made the point, we think, most impressively:

> Techniques of suppression and compelling adherence to the "party line" are the very mark of communism itself in lands where it holds sway. We cannot afford to be misled into believing that we will be providing machinery to combat espionage and sabotage by adopting such techniques. Proposed registration of Communist Party and front organizations' memberships, and labeling of their printed political publications, count for little in fighting wily persons trained in and bent upon intrigue and deception.

This is the nub of the objection to the McCarran bill as it has now passed both houses of Congress. The measure will not contribute in the smallest degree to the protection of internal security; it will hinder that protection. And at the same time it will deal a heavy blow to the freedoms on which security has rested throughout the history of the American Republic. It is this that leads us to hope that the Attorney General's protest will be followed by a clarion veto of the McCarran bill from the White House itself. The President alone can awaken the country to the peril of its own panic.

Nationalizing Steel

With the aid of six invalids, some of them under the watchful eyes of doctors, the Labor government has won a vote of confidence in the House of Commons on the issue of nationalization of the steel industry. There is no question as to the legal right to take this momentous step since the authorizing legislation was passed two years ago, and the date for vesting ownership in the government was set for January 1, 1951, or within a year of that time. Since the board, which is to control the nationalized segment of the industry, has to be set up three months prior to the vesting date, the vote of confidence had to be taken prior to October to make the shift of ownership possible at the earliest possible time.

Opponents of nationalization fear that the change will disrupt the industry and seriously impede the defense effort. For instance, the London Times says that it is "bound to provide the greatest political dissension when national unity in rearmament and defense is indispensable." On the other hand, the law is on the statute books, and it should be kept in mind that the shift from a rigidly controlled system of private operation such as prevails in Great Britain, to one of outright ownership and control is not the epoch-making step that Americans conceive it to be. The chief danger is that inexperienced bureaucratic administrators will take the place of more efficient industrial managers.

If the Labor government is to retain its hold on power, moreover, it has to make some concessions to its radical left wing adherents whose cooperation is required to put through the rearmament program and extend conscription. It is possible, therefore, that nationalization of the steel industry will rally support for the defense program, and offset to some extent, at any rate, the divisive effect of the political controversy precipitated by the decision to put the issue to a test.

New Weapons

There has been much injudicious talk, some with an official tinge, anent the new wonder weapons with which we could confuse and surprise the Russians. Too, many false impressions have been given of the almost negligible numbers of these unveiled to date. The spectacular photographs of the destruction of an unarmed, unmanned immobile tank by an aircraft rocket fired from a stationary platform is quite misleading and entirely different from this selfsame rocket discharged from a fast moving fair-weather platform, the airplane, at an armed, manned, moving tank supported by fighter craft and antiaircraft fire.

The comparison is much like the tale told of a Russian regimental mess at which one officer, boasting of his powess with the pistol, volunteered to shoot out a candle at the far end of the table, which he successfully did. A brother officer then quietly asked him if he thought he could have done as well had the candle been firing at him.

Weapon innovations have won battles but not wars, and it is unwise to place too great reliance on their powers. Germany, with the marked fertility of her technological ingenuity, gained but temporary success from an impressive array of these including the V-1 and V-2 bombs, all of which were finally completely countered by the mass employment of conventional weapons manned and supported by great numbers of well-disciplined, highly trained, ably led, and resolutely determined soldiers of the American, British, and Russian armies.

By virtue of a seeming national weakness we must always broadcast to the world at large our military innovations, even when in the blueprint stage, thus completely destroying the valuable element of surprise and giving the enemy additional time to prepare his counter measures. In sharp contrast Russia exhibits her new weapons and techniques when once committed on the battlefield.

Ordinary prudence would seem to dictate restraint in this regard, when with the vast military might presently arrayed against us and our brother nations no smallest crumb of combat advantage should be forfeited. The Korean campaign is a relatively small one.

Parliamentary Procedure

I would like to quote a little item that is perhaps not entirely "out of joint" with the times. It is taken from the verso of the title page of a British Pelican Book, The English Parliament, by K. R. MacKenzie:

"I doubt that the most important thing was Dunkirk or the Battle of Britain, El Alamein or Stalingrad. Not even the landings in Normandy or the great blows struck by British and American bombers. Historians may decide that any one of these events was decisive, but I am persuaded that the most important thing that happened in Britain was that this nation chose to win or lose the war under the established rules of parliamentary procedure. It feared Nazism, but did not choose to imitate it. The government was given dictatorial power, but it was used with restraint, and the House of Commons was ever vigilant. Do you remember that while London was being bombed in the daylight, the House devoted two days to discussing conditions under which enemy aliens were detained in the Isle of Man? Though Britain fell, there were to be no concentration camps here."

Korean Blame

The Republican politicians are trying to make political capital out of our alleged lack of military preparedness to meet the sudden Communist attack in Korea, blaming this lack on President Truman and the Democrats. Actually, the Republican-dominated Eightieth Congress was responsible. The Republicans in control of that Congress passed a law reducing income taxes by over five billion dollars, so that it was not possible to finance an adequate defense budget. When President Truman vetoed this tax reduction bill (an act that required a high degree of political courage) because he wanted more money to reduce the national debt and finance the armed forces more adequately, the Republicans with their allies from the racially bigoted and reactionary Dixiecrats, passed their unwise tax reduction bill over his veto.

The record shows that the Republicans, not President Truman and the Fair Deal Democrats who support his program, are responsible for the present lack of adequate military preparedness, for they are responsible for forcing the income tax reduction through the Eightieth Congress, to favor the wealthy, which made adequate funds for the armed forces impossible.

Faith Of Our Fathers?

The Sesquicentennial Commission had no alternative but to withdraw its troupe of players from the Anacostia High School Tuesday when the principal objected to a democratic cast performing in that building.

However, the confidence and hope of many people in "The Faith of Our Fathers" as an example of democracy in action were given a terrific jolt when the commission decided to support segregation in the public schools by segregating the cast into white and colored groups. It appears that the matter of ticket sales is more important to the commission than the preservation of its message of democracy and freedom. It is possible that this blunder will have a negative effect on ticket sales.

The emphasis on freedom, unity and democracy which resounds throughout the pageant cannot but seem shallow and far-fetched to any group of high school students, white or colored, upon whom is imposed a segregated cast of a play which is supposed to symbolize those tenets.

It is most unfortunate that this incident had to happen to such a beautiful and convincing patriotic production; especialy at a time when our high school students of recent years are falling together, regardless of race, on the battlefield in the cause of freedom for another nation.

The decision of the Sesquicentennial Commission to "go along" with the antiquated policy of segregation in the public schools is a devastating blow from which the "Faith of Our Fathers" will not soon recover.

Formosan Policy

If this country is to determine a positive, constructive foreign policy on Formosa, common sense and, more important, common justice demand that two principles be strictly adhered to: (1) that Formosa not be allowed to be converted into a military base for any power hostile to the freedom-loving nations of the world (this view is now generally accepted) and (2) that the future of Formosa be left up to the Formosans themselves. To date no sound plan has been proposed by our State Department which encompasses both principles simultaneously, although the policy of the Truman Administration that the Formosan question be handled separately from the Korean is correct as far as it goes. On one hand, the Seventh Fleet is seeing to it that Formosa is not made an advance base for communism, which is also correct; but on the other, we not only tolerate but protect the government of Chiang Kai-shek in Formosa, a government which the Formosans never chose and which they reportedly find more intolerable than the government of the Japanese. This situation must sooner or later come to an end, and must do so before an invasion of Formosa is attempted and before Russia can win many more converts in Asia by capitalizing on what she calls our intervention in the internal affairs of China.

The writer suggests that the United States propose to the United Nations that an attempt be made at resolving the Formosan question in the following manner: (1) Order complete disarmament of Chiang's forces in Formosa under the supervision of on-the-spot U. N. observers, leaving the Seventh Fleet under U. N. command to prevent any attack on the island. (2) Hold a plebiscite on this island, under U. N. supervision, so that the natives may decide under whom they wish to be governed, and abide by that choice. This election, however, should not be held until all interested parties agree that Formosa is to be permanently demiliterized and kept under the sole protection of the U. N. so long as there is any threat to her safety by any outside party. (3) Insist that any violation of Formosa's demilitarized status on the part of whatever government the plebiscite may choose will cause that government to be considered by the U. N. as unqualified to rule, and make it subject to the police action of the armed forces of the U. N., such as are now operating in Korea.

It is possible, of course, that either Russia or Nationalist China would veto in the U. N. any such plan for Formosa as is outlined above; but how could either government explain the veto of such a manifestly fair and democratic plan to the Formosans and to the rest of Asia? A veto by Nationalist China would certainly warrant that she be no longer recognized in the U. N. For not only does she no longer represent the Chinese mainland, but would be proven by a veto to respect not even the rights of the Formosans she governs. This would also be indicated if the Formosans voted Chiang out of their island. Recognition of Mao's government, for the Chinese mainland at least, would then follow logically (provided that, in good grace, it agreed to abide by the results of the Formosan plebiscite), for there would be no other government to recognize. Such recognition would seem no less logical than our present recognition of Communist Russia. Perhaps, however, India might be granted, with Chiang's demise, the permanent place on the Security Council which China now occupies.

The free election which is bound to be held in Korea after the U. N. victory there, and the free election which it is hoped that this country will propose for Formosa, would amply demonstrate the good intentions of the United States in the Far East and renew for us many lost friends among misled masses of China and southeast Asia. Simply stated, Formosan free-determination and an enforceable, permanent demilitarization of that island are "musts" if peace is to be kept in Asia.

East-West—A Schism?

By Marquis Childs

India's Role

SO MUCH has happened in the cataclysmic years since 1940 that events of the first magnitude tend to be obscured against the backdrop of the fantastic history of our era. That is true of the climax of India's long struggle for freedom.

The fact that it came with relatively little violence may be one reason why its historic importance was not entirely appreciated. The pattern of peaceful transition from colonialism to independence was a portent of hope for both Asia and the West.

American sympathy in the long struggle was almost wholly with the Indians. This sympathy in considerable part had its origin in the recollection of our own struggle for freedom from Great Britain; a memory kept alive in many ways.

The British, as they struggled with the problem of whether to hang on in part or let go altogether, were often annoyed with the American viewpoint which they said was naive and oversimplified. I recall an evening of argument at the climax of the struggle between a half-dozen Americans and an able member of the British Embassy staff. Finally, the Britisher said:

"When I return to England, I'm going to start a number of women's clubs that will begin agitation immediately to get equality for the Negro in your Southern States."

THIS TOUCHED two sensitive points. First is the color problem in America, which many Europeans and Asians believe is a handicap so great this country can never take the lead in the effort to bring East and West together in a working partnership. Second is the resentment of what western Europe often has felt was unwarranted American intervention in the relation between Europeans and colonials.

The classic example is Indonesia. The income from this rich colony helped to give the Dutch a living standard that could hardly have been maintained without it. After the war the Dutch were prepared to make political concessions, but they were also prepared to resist the tide of nationalism that was mounting to a violent flood.

In the view of the State Department, to resist this tide with force would be to hand Indonesia over to communism. For Communist propaganda and Communist agents exploit two burning desires of the Asiatic with tireless persistence and patience. One is the desire for independence and the other is the desire of the peasant to own his own land.

Fortunately, an able career diplomat, Merle Cochran, represented American in Indonesia. He won the sympathy of the leaders of the independence movement and helped to guide that movement peacefully toward statehood.

The Dutch are bitterly resentful of America's role. The previous Netherlands Ambassador, Eelco Van Kleffens, called on Secretary of State Dean Acheson shortly before he was to leave Washington. In effect he said this:

"The people of my country will never forgive you for what you have done in taking part in separating us from what we need not have lost."

This suggests some of the complexity and difficulty in the relationship between Europe, America and Asia. That relationship must be worked out harmoniously if the peoples of Asia are not to be drawn into the awful vortex of communism.

INDIA, it seems to me, is the key to a peaceful relationship and, above all, India under the leadership of Prime Minister Nehru. In spite of the uncertainties of his own political position at home, Nehru did not hesitate to align India against the aggression of the North Korean Communists. Without that support, the position of the United Nations in Asia would have been dubious, to say the least.

Some months ago Nehru visited Indonesia. In the course of long talks with the leaders of the new Indonesian government, the Indian Prime Minister gave some advice that went more or less as follows:

"You and I know very well the imperialism of the past. But I think we can stop worrying about that past imperialism. We must be concerned about the imperialism of the present and the future, which is Communist imperialism—another form of white imperialism."

His remarks made a deep impression. Nehru knew what he was talking about because of the threat of Communist force in India.

With the friendship of India there is hope for a future East-West partnership based on freedom and independence. Without it there seems to me little hope. And not nearly enough is being done to insure the development of this friendship.

13th St. Widening

The city is to be congratulated on the excellent methods now being used in widening of 13th st. between Logan Circle and U. st. The work, which has been necessary for several years, is being done in an unobtrusive manner, and traffic on the street has not yet been disturbed.

The abnormal growth of the city toward the outlying suburbs will make it necessary for more through streets, not only to the north, but to Anacostia in the east and Virginia in the south and west. These improvements will have to be made and they should be handled with the same care that is evident in the 13th st. construction.

Matter Of Fact

How They Took Kimpo: II

WITH THE MARINES ON THE SEOUL FRONT.—By noon on the day the Marines took Kimpo, the most important airfield in Korea, the sun was very warm; the attacking battalion had fought briskly most of the morning; and Kimpo was still 7 miles away. Nonetheless, the men of Easy Company at the head of the column seemed as fresh and cheerful as when they started on their mission.

Marching 11 miles into enemy territory to seize an important objective might normally be considered a rather tense operation. But although each marine was carrying 75 pounds of pack and ammunition and weapons (which this reporter emphatically was not), there were moments when the march on Kimpo resembled a rather genial walking picnic—and this although no C-rations, let alone stuffed eggs and squashed tomato sandwiches, were provided from start to finish of the long, hard day.

The picnic asmosphere was largely created by the local people. In the southern beachhead, where the populace has only experienced the frying pan of Syngman Rhee, our men were seldom made to feel welcome. Here, on the approaches to Seoul, however, the villagers have also known the fire of the Communist regime. As a result, almost every small village turned out en masse, the people waving paper South Korean flags, loudly clapping, and offering the astonished marines water and fruit for refreshment.

In two villages, for good measure, the local elder proudly and formally presented bound North Korean officers to the Easy Company commander, Capt. Samuel Jaskilka. The first presentation was made in a little cluster of thatched huts in a pretty dale where a small stream ran among the ripening rice and bean patches. The kneeling captive was surrounded by peasants who moved while he wept loudly and audibly. He was offered to the puzzled Jaskilka much as a chicken might have been. Lieutenant Kim, Easy Company's interpreter, explained:

"Until an hour ago, he take chickens, he take rice, he take everything. Now these people hope you take him and shoot him."

THERE WERE also moments on the march when the atmosphere was not so festive. Fire parties would be sent forward to scout the road ahead, while Jaskilka and the battalion commander, Lieut. Col. Harold Roise, would confer anxiously. Once, while Marine Corsairs were swooping down relentlessly on a target on the right flank, a little L-5 flew over the company and dropped a scrawled message about enemy ahead, which was oddly signed Dearie-2. But even when Lieut. Edward Deptula led Easy Company's forward platoon up onto the high ground commanding Kimpo airfield itself, there was still no trouble. The trouble waited until dusk was falling and Easy Company was taking its objective.

The last push was made from a low rise below which the airfield and its buildings were spread out like a darkening relief map. Off to the right, the battalion tanks and Dog Company were moving forward. To the left a scouting platoon of Easy Company encountered heavy fire. And suddenly the loud noise of bullets filled the patch of road where Colonel Roise and Captain Jaskilka were planning the final attack. The whole party took shelter in a convenient ditch, where the young marines joked about girls in Seoul while the pink tracers whistled just overhead. The company's bearded, fatherly Gunnery Sergt. Robert Burnett shouted to the fire point forward to remember that Dog Company was on our left. A very young voice replied:

"Well, Dog Company ain't doing me no good, and the gooks are shooting, so I am, too."

Meanwhile Roise and Jaskilka had coordinated the plan, as far as any plan can be coordinated, when the darkness is deepening and burning buildings that one had hardly noticed 10 minutes before suddenly become the only landmarks. Jaskilka led the advance, careless of the small arms fire and seemingly perfectly fresh after 11 miles of marching. Other tanks were furiously engaging scattered pockets of resistance. As we reached the taxiway, the North Koreans fled, but now there was a new enemy—the darkness.

OF EASY COMPANY'S few score men, almost all had to be sent off, by platoons or detachments, to investigate one area or another. By the time Jaskilka reached the shattered buildings at the end of the long airstrip, his party was reduced to hardly more than a baker's dozen. The night was clear but very dark, and when we settled wearily on the concrete airstrip to await the rest of the company, it seemed to the inexperienced observer that Jaskilka's little party would spend the night alone. Then, by some unexplained miracle, dim shapes began to loom up and respond to challenges in familiar voices.

By 9:30, the company had been reunited. Jaskilka, whose voice sounded tired at last, established a defense perimeter along a line of buildings. ("If the gooks come in between the buildings, you'll just have to get them on the way in," he told one of the platoon commanders. "It's the best we can do.") There was still small arms fire here and there. The night was freezing. There had been no food since dawn. But the men dug their foxholes with methodical energy, and dropped into them quietly. Before very long, while some stood guard, all the rest of the company was sleeping on the hard ground.

At 3:30 next morning, the sleepers were aroused by the customary dawn attack. The North Koreans crept up on all three companies of the battalion, Easy, Fox and Dog, as well as the battalion command post.

For two hours, there was a long, tense confusion of charges by small enemy groups, sharp firing, short lulls and then more firing and more charges. It was like the old description of Indian onslaughts on our Westward marching settlers, for the enemy were all about but still invisible except at closest quarters.

With the light, however, the tanks could come in. The attack weakened rapidly. The wounded—there were a good many wounded and some dead—were brought in. As this reporter boarded the ambulance to ride back to the rear, tanks and marines were moving up together, 50 yards away, on the last enemy strong point. It looked like a bad battle photograph, and only the still continuing bursts of firing gave it reality. Colonel Roise summed up the situation when he genially said goodby.

"You can say we've got Kimpo but you'll have to wait a little before you can say Kimpo is secure."

County Goes to Markey

del, 7; Caroline, 3; Kent, 3; Montgomery, 7; Queen Annes, 3; Somerset, 4; Talbot, 4, and Wicomico, 5. These add up to 78. At the time he made the claim, Tuesday, 11 votes appeared unsure, and 4 of these—the 4 of Somerset County—have since been given to Butler by the official count.

Maryland's official canvass of the primary returns—in full swing in the counties today and Saturday—is expected to nail down the result in close contests by Sunday, although some counties' results may remain out of the State totals until next week.

The unit votes—each county has from 3 to 7 and Baltimore has 42—are cast in a State party convention according to the county-by-county majority results. The system would make Butler winner of the nomination although loser of the State-wide popular majority on the basis of available returns and unless the official figures change that picture.

Similarly, Governor William Preston Lane, jr., out of the unofficial returns, showed up as winner of the Democratic nomination for Governor while his chief opponent, George P. Mahoney of Baltimore, piled up a larger popular vote.

But Mahoney, still unyielding, yesterday demanded a recount in Garrett County. An aide said he would recommend making a similar demand in Wicomico.

Fourth Judicial Circuit Court Judge George Henderson signed the recount petition and forwarded it to Garrett County. The petition inferred no irregularities, but asked for the recount solely because the vote was so close—the margin was 53 votes, with Lane getting 858 and Mahoney 805. No date is set for the recount.

Official Prince Georges figures in the Lane-Mahoney race gave Lane 7416 and Mahoney 5565. In the Democratic senatorial primary, U. S. Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) got 8136; former Representative John A. Meyer of Baltimore, 2699 and Hugh J. Monaghan, 2d, Baltimore attorney, got 2449.

Prince Georges also gave Miss Helen Elizabeth Brown, Baltimore lawyer, 1498 votes to 1026 for William A. Gunter, Cumberland lawyer, in their race for the GOP nomination as Maryland's Attorney General. But Gunter has been leading in unofficial returns for both popular and convention vote majorities. In terms of official counts, the race still is undecided.

In another development, Elmer W. Sterling, Republican committee chairman in Queen Anne's County, confirmed a report that he had received an election-day telephone call from a man who said it would be worth $1000 for the county to go to Markey.

For comment, Sterling gave the official results: Butler, winning, with 278 to Markey's 86. If it had been $10,000, said Sterling, the result would have been the same; as for what the caller suggested, Sterling declared, "We don't play it that way here."

Sterling runs a drug store in Church Hill, Md.

Markey was quoted in Baltimore as having disclaimed any knowledge of, or connection with the call that Sterling described.

Green Made AFL President For 27th Term; Sees Uniting

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 21 (AP).—William Green was named to a 27th term as head of the American Federation of Labor today, and in accepting said he has hope the division within American organized labor soon will be over.

The 77-year-old Green also told the AFL's 69th annual convention:

"They've got the money but we've got the votes and we'll defeat Ohio's Senator (Robert) Taft."

He also predicted labor has a good chance in aiding in the defeat of "two other men on our list"—Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) and Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.).

The aging, balding Green, a former Ohio coal miner, said he will endeavor to compose AFL's differences with the CIO and bring about labor unity.

"If there is any sacrifice I might make in order to make labor unity possible, I'll make that sacrifice," he said.

Convention officials interpreted this to mean Green would be willing to step aside should only the question of selection of a chief executive stand in the way of an AFL-CIO merger.

Green's reelection was by an overwhelming voice vote on a motion for unanimous selection.

Returned to office as vice presidents were William L. Hutcheson, Indianapolis, of the carpenters' union; Matthew Woll, New York City, photo-engravers; Joseph N. Weber, Los Angeles, musicians; George M. Harrison, Cincinnati, railroad and steamship clerks; Daniel J. Tobin, Indianapolis, teamsters; Harry C. Bates, Washington, D. C., bricklayers; W. C. Birthright, Indianapolis, barbers; W. C. Doherty, Washington, letter carriers; David Dubinsky, New York City, International Ladies Garment Workers Union; Charles J. MacGowan, Kansas City, boilermakers; Herman Winter, Chicago, bakery and confectionery workers; D. W. Tracy, Washington, electrical workers, and William L. Four Times as Much Aluminum is Ready Companies like Aluminum Company of America look at a national emergency in much the same spirit as an individual soldier. For a company is only people.

When World War II struck, Alcoa volunteered, like hundreds of thousands of individual Americans, and did its job. For whatever job America now faces, we're better prepared than ever.

TO OUR GOVERNMENT WE REPORT

From us, and other aluminum producers, there is plenty of aluminum production for any announced military program . . .

Even before Korea, more than four times as much production as in 1939. A good deal more is possible.

That increase is due in part to the fact that Alcoa spent 300 million dollars of its own money, starting before World War II, to add almost 500 million pounds a year to our wartime output . . .

And due also to the fact that Alcoa designed and built for the government 24 additional plants, without fee or profit. We built them in record time, and operated them with Alcoa personnel. Most of these plants have since been acquired, or are now being negotiated for, by other aluminum makers.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS WE PROMISE

We will keep the prices of the Alcoa Aluminum Products you get as low as we can keep them. In the face of rising prices on almost every other commodity, and increased costs of our own, our base price is now lower than in 1939.

We will co-operate all possible with any manufacturer who has a long-term development problem in aluminum that requires no immediate tonnage of metal . . .

We will help you make the most of the aluminum available. This offer is backed by the full Research and Development facilities, and the know-how of an organization that has spent 62 years making aluminum useful.

TO NEW ACQUAINTANCES
We Have To Say "SORRY!"

Military requirements come first. New prospective customers will understand that the aluminum remaining must be distributed fairly among our present customers.

We cannot offer aluminum to manufacturers as a substitute for other materials in short supply.

'Catcher' Ray Arcel

Charles Has One Expert With Him

By Red Smith

SOUTH FALLSBURG, N. Y., Sept. 21 (NYHT).—In the sunshine of a glorious Indian Summer morning, Ezzard Charles jogged six miles over rolling country roads and returned for his daily exercise in punching the faces of his friends out of shape.

RED SMITH

Apart from his physical condition, which appears to the non-medical eye to be everything one would expect of a 29-year-old who has been training as a fighter since he was 16, the most striking quality about the approximate heavyweight champion of the world is his cool confidence.

Possession of 47/48ths of the title has made a poised professional out of a shy young man who used to be diffident to the point of sheepishness.

Down in his camp in Pompton Lakes,, N. J., Joe Louis seemed as sure as could be that after his match with Charles in Yankee Stadium next Wednesday he would be the first man in history to give up the heavyweight title and win it back.

"WHEN YOU GO into a fight," Ezzard was saying earnestly, "what can happen to you? It's like any contest, a ball game or anything. The worst you can do is just lose, and you don't figure on that."

"You mean it doesn't occur to you, personally, that you're going to lose a fight, Ezzard?"

"Of course not," said the fellow who has lost only once in seven years.

"There is more than confidence in him," said Ray Arcel, who has been up here working with Jimmy Brown, Charles' regular trainer. "There is a grudge in his heart. I know. I've been living with him, going out on the road with him, talking to him. He doesn't talk much, but what he says, he means.

"Ezzard feels that the International Boxing Club would like to see Louis win, because Joe's name has always been worth such big money at the box office. Ezzard feels he's being used, that they lent the title to him and tried to build him up as champion and now want to take the title away from him. And he keeps saying to me, 'They're not going to do it.'"

Next to Enterprise, Arcel is the most celebrated carrier of the twentieth century. Working in the corners of 10 of Louis' opponents, Ray won the title of "Meat Wagon" by hauling approximately one ton of gristle out of the ring after Joe's fist landed.

THE TITLE was honestly earned, because Ray is a slender guy, not uncommonly thick through the biceps, and he needed rare skill along with his limited strength to hoist the great hulks of blubber which Louis left at his feet.

"And out of the whole bunch," Arcel said, "this is the only one with the equipment to beat Joe. Look at the list and you'll see what I mean:

"There was Paulino Uzcudun, who was big and tough but never had a chance and knew it. Then Mike Jacobs needed an opponent for Louis in the Hipprodrome, and they got Jorge Brescia, who had never fought a main event, had never even gone six rounds.

"After Joe was knocked out by Schmeling, they wanted to build him up again and who could be better for that than a former champion? So they got old Jack Sharkey, and Jack got into the best shape he could at his age, but nobody was foolish enough to believe he had a chance with young Joe.

"THEN I WORKED with Jim Braddock, and Jim thought he had a chance. Jim always thought he could whip anybody in the world. He had a good right hand punch, too, but in those days that wasn't nearly enough to take in against Louis.

"But remember this. Even when Joe was 23 years old, boxers gave him trouble. Who gave Joe his tough fights, outside of the first Schmeling match? Bob Pastor, Tommy Farr, Arturo Godoy, Billy Conn, Jersey Joe Walcott. Boxers who could stick and move.

"If those fellows had a punch, they could have whipped Joe. They bothered him by just moving. This guy can move, and he can punch."

Detroit Gets Six Runs in 1st, Whacks Macks, 8-2

By Charles C. Cain

DETROIT, Sept. 21 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers today brushed past the hapless Philadelphia Athletics 8-2 to climb into a first-place tie with the idle New York Yankees.

The victory gave the Detroiters a sweep of the three-game series with the A's and left them in a good position to grab sole ownership of the No. 1 spot when they meet Cleveland tomorrow. The Yankees will be idle again tomorrow.

Lady Luck, who gave the Tigers a great big helping hand in their 6-5 win over the A's yesterday, came through for them again today in a six-run first inning that settled the issue in a hurry.

It was a weird inning for pitcher Joe Coleman, one of the few pitchers who was not on the Athletics' ailing list. Four walks and three hits figured in that six-run uprising, even before the chilled crowd of 5194 had gotten comfortably seated.

Coleman was fairly stingy with base hits but his overgenerosity in giving up nine walks during his six-inning stay snuffed out any chances the Athletics had to win.

Tiger pitcher Freddie Hutchinson was tagged hard and often as the Athletics banged out 13 solid hits. Detroit collected only 8 off Coleman and his successor, rookie Joe Murray.

Opening Week Picks

Terps Over Georgia But It'll Be Close

By Will Grimsley

NEW YORK, Sept. 21 (AP).—Boasting a perfect, untarnished slate, we attack the first week of football crystal-gazing without trepidation. There's only one direction to go—down.

Man the battlements, men, here we go:

MARYLAND OVER GEORGIA—The Gator Bowl champs are still big and tough, but count on a stronger Georgia to make it one of the best games of the day.

CALIFORNIA OVER SANTA CLARA—Coach Pappy Lyn Waldorf will miss Quarterback Bob Celeri, who was graduated, but not as much as Santa Clara will miss those 19 lettermen.

LOUISIANA STATE OVER KENTUCKY—Everybody likes the Wildcats, so we'll string along with the boys from the Bayous.

WAKE FOREST OVER BOSTON COLLEGE—Another pick against the grain, but we figure Peahead Walker has been pointing.

SOUTHERN METHODIST OVER GEORGIA TECH—Kyle Rote will be the difference.

MICHIGAN STATE OVER OREGON STATE—It looks like a long ride home from East Lansing for the Pacific Coast boys.

NORTH CAROLINA OVER NORTH CAROLINA STATE—Little Dick Bunting, who gave Notre Dame such an uncomfortable afternoon last year, will continue as a nuisance in Charlie Justice's shoes. N. C. by two TDs.

YALE OVER CONNECTICUT—No blues for the Blue in this one. A nod to Herman Hickman's gang.

FRIDAY NIGHT

Temple over Albright, Mississippi Over Memphis State, Auburn over Wofford, Detroit over Hillsdale, Colorado State over Sterling.

Signed as Reward for '50 Job

Win or Lose, Boston Wants O'Neill for '51

BOSTON, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—Manager Steve O'Neill, who inherited the fourth-place Boston Red Sox at midseason and led them into pennant contention, was rewarded today with a contract to continue as pilot in 1951.

General Manager Joe Cronin announced that O'Neill's contract had been renewed for next season, but made no reference to salary arrangements for the former coach who took over as manager June 24 when Joe McCarthy quit.

The disclosure that the Red Sox wanted O'Neill back next year, win or lose the 1950 American League pennant, marked the highest point thus far in the remarkable baseball comeback of the chubby onetime miner's boy from Minooka, Pa.

Only two years ago, the Detroit Tigers dropped O'Neill as manager and last season the Cleveland Indians let him go as a coach.

Under O'Neill, the Sox have won 56 and lost only 25—a .691 average. Today, the team was only two games behind the leaders.

Players May Get TV Cut

CINCINNATI, Sept. 21 (AP).—Players who get into the 1950 World Series may get a share of the $800,000 to be paid for televising the games.

This was indicated today when Walter Mulbry, secretary of baseball issued the following statement:

"The commissioner (A. B. Chandler) probably will call a meeting at World Series time to discuss the manner in which the $800,000 received from the sale of the World Series television rights will be handled.

"First consideration must be given to guarantee the financial security of the players' pension plan, inaugurated in 1947 and guaranteed by club owners for a five-year period."

Neither Chandler nor Mulbry would say in so many words that the players would get a cut of the television money, but it generally was understood that was the reason for reopening an issue which once apparently was closed.

Lopez Signs Again

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 21 (AP)—Al Lopez was signed today to manage the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association for another year.

Kennelly, Savage, Barreira, of GW, Miss Va. Game

Three of George Washington's key players will not be able to play against Virginia Saturday in Charlottesville.

Joe Kennelly and Walt Savage, first string defensive end and halfback have badly twisted knees, and little Bino Barreira, one of the Colonials' more promising sophomore ball carriers, has a pulled leg muscle.

That puts the Colonels ahead of Virginia in the injury department, 3-2. Cavalier End Bob Weir is definitely out with a bad knee, and Fullback Johnny Papit, their best runner, may miss the game because of a twisted ankle.

Spahn Beats Cards, 5-0, for 21st Victory

BOSTON, Sept. 21 (AP).—Lefty Warren Spahn became the National League's first 21-game winner today by pitching the Boston Braves to a two-hit 5-0 shutout over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Only two rivals reached base as Spahn turned in his first whitewashing job in his 25 completed games.

Rookie Ed Mickelson, filling in at first base for grippe-stricken Stan Musial, singled and advanced on Marty Marion's sacrifice in the second inning. Eddie Kazak got the other St. Louis single with two out in the fifth.

Spahn was given a flying start by his mates. In the first frame Roy Hartsfield led off by working Gerry Staley for a base on balls and Sam Jethroe followed with his seventeenth homer.

Redskins Leave Today for Game With Packers

Confident and favored to make Green Bay their second straight National Football league victim Sunday, the Redskins leave Washington for Milwaukee at 2 p. m. today from National Airport.

Except for Fullback Pete Stout and Rookie End Danny Brown, the squad is in tip-top shape. Both have minor leg injuries but will be ready to face the Packers.

The Redskins, who swept five exhibition games, trounced the Baltimore Colts in the league opener last Sunday and are 17½ point favorites to knock off the Packers, who were drubbed by Detroit last week.

His Two Blocked Punts Won Game

Terps Would Do Well to Follow Example Set by Tatum Against Georgia 16 Years Ago

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

IF JIM TATUM'S MARYLAND football players follow the example set by their head coach on the same field 16 years ago, the Old Liners will lick Georgia Saturday in Athens.

In 1934, as Left Tackle Jim Tatum, of the University of North Carolina, Tatum blocked two punts to lead the Tar Heels to an upset 14-0 victory over Georgia.

"That won't happen Saturday because Georgia has a much better team this year," Tatum said yesterday after his squad got in its final licks before shoving off for Athens by plane this morning.

For the second straight day, Tatum said he was pleased with the squad's showing, but for the umpteenth straight day he insisted his team wasn't ready for the likes of Georgia at this stage of the season.

"Later on in the year, we'd take them, but not now," he repeated. "We're going to try and hold them to a respectable score."

COCAPTAIN Ray Krouse, second string All-America tackle last season, missed practice for the third straight day yesterday. He's been confined to his home with flu, but will make the trip to Athens. "He'll play, but he'll be awful weak," Trainer Duke Wyre reported.

Either Ed Pobiak, a regular last year, or Dave Christianson, a reserve in 1949, will spell Krause, whose loss is a tremendous blow to Maryland's hopes.

THERE'LL be something besides State pride at stake when the Marylanders and Georgians clash. Twenty-five Maryland players hail from Pennsylvania while 29 of Georgia's 54-man squad are from various parts of Yankeeland. Youngstown, Ohio, which contributed Frankie Sinkwich to Georgia seven years ago, has two representatives on the 1950 Bulldogs, both regulars.

SATURDAY'S GAME marks the debut of two of the most heralded players in Georgia's High School history, Halfbacks Lauren Hargrove and Chuck Magoni. Hargrove, 180-pound, 20-year-old speedster from Fitzgerald, Ga., was one of the most sought after players in Dixieland two years ago.

HE MADE the high-school All-America as did Magoni, who was a teammate of Gil Stephenson, Army's great fullback, at Columbus, Ga., High several years ago. Magoni suffered a broken neck in a 1947 practice game and was sidelined until 1949, when he broke his leg. Although a senior, he hasn't played a minute of varsity ball.

Maryland Suspends 2 Trainers

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

MARLBORO, Sept. 21.—Suspensions were dealt to two horse trainers by the Maryland Racing Commission today as the result of alleged stimulation at Bel Air.

John McGhie was banned from all connections with racing for a period of five years while Charles Lamparter was set down for one year. The lighter sentence to Lamparter, explained J. William Graham, commission secretary, was due to his being found guilty only of negligence in the "doping" of Electron. The trainer testified that he did not stimulate the horse and there was no evidence to contradict him, Graham said.

The stimulating of the horse Dram was admitted by McGhie, the secretary said, and consequently his trainer's license has been revoked and he will be denied all privileges of the tracks. McGhie's horses are banned unless they are placed in new hands through a bonifide sale.

Both Electron and Dram were winners of their races at Bel Air following which the drug amphetamine was allegedly found following urine tests of the thoroughbreds.

Pirates Blow 3-0 Lead as Palica Wins

BROOKLYN, Sept. 21 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers spotted the Pittsburgh Pirates three runs in the first inning today, but got four of their own in the fourth and five more in the fifth to record a 10-8 triumph.

The Dodgers used four flingers. They led off with rookie Jim Romano, but he was shelled in the first and Dan Bankhead came in. The latter lasted until Ralph Branca took over in the fifth. Erv Palica went to the mound in the sixth, held the Buccaneers the rest of the way and got credit for the triumph.

Area Teams Should Hit Postwar Peak

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

COLLEGIATE FOOTBALL in this area should hit a postwar peak this fall. Every sign points in that direction.

A good crop of sophomores has arrived on the scene, and almost every team figures to improve as a result.

Herb Heft

Already, the press associations and magazine polls are ranking Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and Duke among the best 25 teams in the Nation.

For the first time, too, area linemen are gaining All-America recognition. In recent years, these honors have been reserved almost exclusively for the giants of the Far and Middle West.

Maryland has three candidates for the All-America line in Ray Krouse, 248-pound tackle from Washington; Bob Ward, 185-pound guard from Elizabeth, N. J., and Elmer Wingate, 215-pound end from Baltimore. "They're the best left side of the line in the country," declares Maryland Coach Jim Tatum.

Krouse made the Associated Press' All-America second team last season, and Ward has already been named to the 1950 first team by the Saturday Evening Post.

MARYLAND DOESN'T have a monopoly on the good players. William and Mary's fine end, Vito Ragazzo, has a better chance for All-America honors, with Leon Hart of Notre Dame and Art Weiner of North Carolina graduated.

Last season, Ragazzo, 6-foot-3-inch, 195-pounder from Aflex, Ky., set two all-time collegiate records by scoring 15 touchdowns and gaining 793 yards, all on pass receptions. But he didn't have the publicity nor the team that Weiner or Hart had going for them.

At Navy, Eddie Erdelatz has a first-rate tackle in Paul Tetreault, a 225-pound junior from Greenfield, Mass.

The area is loaded with good centers. The best of the lot is probably North Carolina's 200-pound Huck Holdash.

Not far behind Holdash are Washington and Lee's Joe McCutcheon, 200-pounder from Charleston, W. Va., and Virginia's Owen Meadows, 190, from Hintley, W. Va. McCutcheon was selected as the best center in Virginia last year by newsmen.

AS USUAL, there are plenty of outstanding backs. The boys who will be getting most of the headlines when the season gets hot will be Virginia's Johnny Papit, Duke's Billy Cox, William and Mary's Dickie Lewis, North Carolina's Billy Hayes, Washington and Lee's Gil Bocetti, Navy's Bob Zastrow, Maryland's Ed (Mighty Mo) Modzelewski, George Washington's Andy Davis.

Papit, 195-pound fullback from Philadelphia, ranked second in the Nation in ground gaining last season.

The best punter, now that Justice is gone, may well be a Wake Forest sophomore, Joe Koch, a 192-pounder, who boots 'em more than 60 yards and averaged 46 yards per try as a freshman.

Other outstanding area players are:
ENDS—Ron Casto (VPI), Tom Higgins (N. C.), Blaine Earon (Duke), Neal Petree (V. M. I.), Talbot Trammell (W. & L.), Bill Wilson (Navy), Gene Schroeder (Virginia), Bob Weir (Virginia).
TACKLES—Jim Feula (G. W.), Dick Johnson (Virginia), Bob Noppinger (Georgetown), Mike Radulovic (W. & L.), Ed Lipstopad (Wake Forest), Tank Lawrence (Duke), Ronnie Gonier (W. & M.).

CENTERS—Jake Rowden (Maryland), Bill Bryson (Navy), Kirby Bernich (V. M. I.), Bob Gaona (Wake Forest), Jim Ed Gibson (Duke).
BACKS WHO PASS AND RUN—Steve Osisek (Virginia), Dickie Davis (Wake Forest), Bud Fisher (V. P. I.).
BACKS WHO SPECIALIZE IN PASSING—Paul Yewcic (W. & M.), Glenn Wild (Duke), Carroll Blackerby (Wake Forest), Frank Mattingly (Georgetown), John Scarbath (Maryland), Jim Lesane (Virginia).
RUNNING AND PASS-CATCHING BACKS—Sterling Wingo (V. P. I.), Dick Bunting (N. C. State), Nub Smith (Wake Forest), Walt Michaels (W. & L.), Bugs Thompson (Georgetown), Gino Pagluica (Georgetown), Frank Adorney (Navy), Frank Hauff (Navy), Ed Fullerton (Maryland), Bob Shemonski (Maryland), Joe Petruzzo (Maryland), Jim Kline (G. McDougall To Play With Ramblers

By Bill Gilbert

Eastern High's hopes of winning the Interhigh Football League championship have been boosted considerably by Pat McDougall's decision to play football after all.

Pat originally said he would not play football this year because he has a chance to sign a contract to play baseball with the Brooklyn Dodgers and did not want to run the risk of injuring himself in football. He is a catcher.

McDougall, one of the best running fullbacks in local scholastic circles, was a star at Central High last year and transferred to Eastern this year.

Eastern plays Chamberlain this afternoon at Eastern in the Interhigh League opener, the only game in the circuit today. It is the feature game of a weekend schedule oif 17 games, five this afternoon, nine tonight and four tomorrow.

McDougall joins another former Central boy, Jimmy Sullivan, in the Eastern backfield. Sullivan is a left-handed passer on the T-formation and fools opponents with his deceptive handoffs and pitchouts.

In Chesapeake Bay

Fish Conservation Program Paying Off

By Ralph Murdock

THE LARGEST brood of striped bass in 40 years, says David H. Wallace, has helped to boom sport fishing in the Chesapeake Bay this year. Wallace is the chairman of the Maryland Tidewater Commission and also reports that bluefish are also in near record quantities.

Murdock

The good stock of fish now in the bay is attributed by Wallace chiefly to the fisheries management program being carried out by the commission. This conservation program limits the number of commercial fishing nets and thus tends to lower the commercial catch and boost the supply of fish available to sport fishermen.

Maryland's Tidewater Fisheries Commission has published, for free distribution, a booklet of fishing in the Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic Ocean. The booklet contains helpful hints on where and when to fish and the type of successful baits to use.

With the booklet is included a fishing information kit giving a list of fishing guides at popular fishing points on the bay and ocean. The entire kit may be obtained from the Department of Information, Box 706, Annapolis, Md.

FOR THIS excellent morsel of fishing news we add—our sincere thanks to Dave Wallace. To the anglers we suggest—get yourself a kit.

Rock fishing now occupies the spotlight in the upper bay—not only for quantity but quality. We had the pleasure of being on the Carol Ann Wednesday afternoon when a 14¼-pound striper was pulled aboard by Claire (a man's name) Banks of Kinsley, Kans. It's the first big rock we've seen taken since last spring.

It was Bank's first trip to Sharp's Light and the Kansan quickly yelled, "This beats our fishing in Kansas. The biggest fish I ever saw there was a 4-pound catfish." The party, which also included Lee Duckett, picked up 42 more rock from 1½ to 3½ pounds) and two bluefish. The catch was made between 4:30 and 7:30 p. m. A No. 3 all-white Lusby lure with pork rind attached was the successful bait.

Weekend Suggestions

Rockfish—Sharp's Island for the stripers. Excellent catches being made with all white polar bear lures with pork rind. You've got to jig 'em to get 'em.

Bluefish—Well scattered with Poplar Island area and Point Lookout Light being best. Nungesser No. 1 spoons will entice the blue devils. Use some trolling weight.

Spot—Still very plentiful. Cornfield Harbor and Holland Point areas are still hot. Bloodworm is a positive bait.

Reds Chase Maglie, Beat Giants, 8-5

NEW YORK, Sept. 21 (AP).—Sal Maglie, who had run up a winning skein of 11 games, came up against the pesky Cincinnati Reds today and was knocked out of the box in the fourth inning. Luke Sewells then went on to paste an 8-5 defeat on the New York Giants.

Races are scheduled for Saturday at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. and Sunday at 10 a. m.

It is likely that last year's entry of 200 craft may be topped. The hottest competition will be in the smaller classes. Eastern Shore' skippers, Mason Sheehan, Easton, Md., second district Star medalist, and Billy Myers, Oxford, Md., two-year P. C. winner, are entered in the Stars, as are Bob Dunigan, Washington, and George C. Dewar, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Coming down from New Jersey for the Penguin class are Runyan Colie, 1950 national champion, and Mike Fagan, runner-up in the trim Penguin class. Other Jersey Penguin celebs entered are John Pilling and Jack Wright.

Cream of the Chesapeake windjammers are expected for the 10 class events, according to Chairman Bill Heintz. Frank Marquardt, Alexandria, is the top favorite in the Thistle class. Marquardt took the national championship at Milford, Conn., in mid-August. Gunning for Marquardt will be Jack Smith, Frank Greenman, Eric Nordholm, Dr. Walter Lawson and regatta chairman, Bill Heintz—all blue ribbon thistle skippers.

Plenty of vantage points are available for spectators, at no cost, along the Hains Point seawall.

C. U. Rector Made Auxiliary Bishop

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

In an ancient and colorful ceremony, three hours long, the Most Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, rector of Catholic University, yesterday was consecrated titular bishop of Atenia and auxiliary bishop of the archdiocese of Washington.

The climax to 46 years of priesthood, all but four of them with the university, came as the new bishop was invested with crozier, mitre and ring and his consecrator, intoning in Latin "Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come!" annointed his head with oil.

A modern note was found in the sermon of the Most Rev. Matthew F. Brady, bishop of Manchester, N. H., who declared the consecration was taking place "in another grave hour of our country's short history."

A crowd including Government dignitaries and scores of archbishops from as far away as Nanking and Indo-China filled the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the university campus.

The Most Rev. Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, was the consecrating prelate. The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington, and the Most Rev. Henry J. O'Brien, bishop of Hartford, Conn., were assistant consecrators.

The rites began as the consecrator, rising from the faldstool, directed the reading of the papal bull authorizing the consecration. It was so done—in Latin and in English. Except for this and Bishop Brady's sermon, the entire ceremony was in Latin.

A climax was reached as the examination of the bishop-elect ended and he prostrated himself before the altar during the Litany of the Saints.

The chant finished, the bishop-elect came to a kneeling position before Archbishop Cicognani.

Laying the Book of the Gospels upon the neck and shoulders of the bishop-elect, the consecrator intoned:

"Receive the Holy Ghost."

The ceremonial ended as the new bishop, his voice singing higher each time, genuflected three times and wished his consecrator in the ancient Latin refrain "Ad multos annos . . . For many years . . ."

Afterwards a luncheon honoring Bishop McCormick was served in the university gymnasium.

County Building Under Way

A contract has been awarded and work begun on the first stage of Montgomery County's million-dollar office building at Jefferson and Perry sts. in Rockville.

The contract was awarded to the Blake Construction Co. of Washington on its low bid of $184,648, County Manager Irving G. McNayr said yesterday. Excavation for the new building began Wednesday.

McNayr pointed out that construction of the new office building will be in two stages.

The contract just awarded calls for site excavation and purchase and erection of structural steel. The county already has advertised for bids to complete the building, with bids due October 20.

Rich Wills to Gavin His Cry 'Where Is the Money?'

By The Associated Press

"Where are you going to get the money?"

For 18 years, almost every day that the House has been in session, Representative Robert F. Rich (R., Pa.) has raised this plaintive cry in a one-man crusade against heavy Government spending.

Rich decided recently not to seek a tenth term. Political foes as well as friends said they'd miss his daily battle cry. But as it turns out, they won't. For Rich told the House yesterday:

"So it will not be forever lost, I hereby will, give and bequeath it to (Representative) Leon H. Gavin of Pennsylvania . . . to use daily in this body during the term of his congressional life."

Gavin, also a Republican.

Six Stores Install Charge Plate Plan

Six Washington department and specialty stores have banded together to give their customers a "charge-it" system by which a single metal plate may be used for identification in all the stores.

The stores are The Hecht Co., Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., S. Kann and Sons, Lansburgh and Bro., Raleigh Haberdasher and Woodward and Lothrop. Metal plates for charge customers are already in use at The Hecht Co.

These stores have formed the Washington Shopping Plate Associates to operate the service. W. W. Everett, jr., assistant vice president of Woodward and Lothrop, is chairman of the group.

The new service, which goes into operation Monday, will affect about 250,000 customers, Everett said. The shopping plates are currently being mailed in alphabetical order to charge customers of the six member stores. At a rate of 50,000 a week it will be in early November before all the stores' charge customers have their plates.

Designed to simplify "charging it," the system is built around one thin metal identification plate carried by the customer.

Each store is assigned a number —1 to 6. Depending on what numbers are embossed on the plate, it will tell whether the customer has accounts in any or all of the six concerns.

Possession of a plate does not automatically establish credit in all six stores. The plate must first indicate that the customer already has accounts with them.

The system will have the great advantage of requiring the customer to carry only one charge account identification for all six stores and of enabling a sales clerk to tell at a glance if the customer has an account in the particular store concerned.

The mechanics for charging a purchase will be as follows:

The customer selects his or her purchases and the sales clerk lists them on the sales slip. The space at the top for the customer's name and address is left blank.

The customer signs his or her name on the slip then gives the sales clerk the shopping plate.

The plate is placed on a small, hand-operated device called an addresser. The charge slip is placed over the plate and the device imprints the slip with the customer's name and address. The plate is then returned to the

The system has been hailed as a time saver wherever established. Imprinting the customer's name and address with the plate requires only a few seconds whereas writing the name and address may require up to a minute.

Charge System Set For Symphony Tickets

Starting Monday, music lovers here may purchase season tickets for National Symphony concerts without paying cash, Charles B. Dulcan, sr., general manager of the Hecht Co., announced last night.

Under the new system, persons may reserve tickets for the 26 concerts at the National Symphony ticket office, Kitt's, 1330 G st. nw. or at a special booth in Hecht's downtown store and have them charged to their Hecht account.

Bank Loans In D. C. Reach All-Time High

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington bank loans reached a new all-time high in the week ended September 13, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond indicated yesterday.

Loans and discounts of 17 member Washington banks (two are not members) on that date aggregated $280,924,000. This was an increase of $3,234,000 for the week and a jump of $46,359,000 for the 12-month period.

The upsurge here in loans is in common with a nationwide trend. The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday an unprecedented 398 million dollar rise in business loans by banks in the nation's leading cities for the week ended September 13.

Climaxing an unbroken week-to-week gain since June 1, the 398-million upsurge dwarfed the previous record for a one-week rise, 252 million dollars, set in the week ended September 15, 1948.

The upswing in business loans has continued in the face of limited moves by the Federal Reserve Board to increase short-term interest rates as a mans of discouraging borrowing, and thus putting the brakes on inflation.

Just yesterday in a Boston speech, Thomas B. McCabe warned that "alarming symptoms" of inflation are evident and "the outlook for a serious inflationary spiral is foreboding."

McCabe, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, listed "a few facts which highlight the seriousness of the problem we face." He said loans of all commercial banks since the Korean invasion have increased 2½ billion dollars, a "phenomenal" expansion and consumer indebtedness has been "growing at a spectacular rate in the past few months."

FDIC Bill Signed

President Truman yesterday signed legislation increasing from $5000 to $10,000 the amount of federal insurance on individual bank accounts covered by the Government.

SALES TREND: Retail sales totaled $12,475,000,000 in August, topping July by more than 2 percent and August, 1949, by 17 percent, the Commerce Department reported. The Commerce report, however, supported earlier evidence from other sources that a slowdown occurred in August in the buying rush. This rush started a couple of weeks after the Korean fighting began June 25.

HONOR: Thomas J. Watson has been chosen to receive the 1950 "Industrialist of the Year" award of the Society of Industrial Realtors. The announcement was made yesterday by Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, chairman of an impartial award board, following a meeting here. Watson, president of the International Business Machines Corp., was singled out for recognition "for his life-long insistence upon intensive research, development and marketing which have resulted in an array of business machines that have revolutionized business systems of accounting and record keeping."

BUILDING: Washington building permits in the first eight months showed a drop of $3,692,297 from the same 1949 period, Dun & Bradstreet reported. This year's total was $47,943,232 against $51,635,529, according to the research agency.

EARNINGS: Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's net income in August exceeded two million dollars, President Roy B. White reported. He said net for the first eight months this year would approximate $8,500,000, compared with $7,473,180 in same 1949 period. Other earnings statements:

Mine Owners Form Unit to Face Lewis

A large bloc of coal operators yesterday joined forces on a permanent basis in a move to strengthen their bargaining power with John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers.

The operators, producing 40 percent of the Nation's soft coal, formed the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, and named a one-time UMW member as the man to stand up against John L. He is Harry M. Moses of Pittsburgh, who resigned as head of the U. S. Steel coal mining empire to take the full-time task of dealing and fighting with Lewis.

The new association represents operators in western and central Pennsylvania, Ohio and northern West Virginia, who produce around 153 million tons of soft coal annually, out of a national output of 360 million.

Up to now, these operators have gotten together only at contract bargaining time. As a result, the operators found themselves to be "rank amateurs" when it came to negotiating with the wily president of the United Mine Workers, in the words of George H. Love, president of the gigantic Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co., and in the past chief spokesman for the northern operators.

The 54-year-old Moses, of Welsh extraction like Lewis, and hailing from the same home town of Lucas, Ia., has long been considered the key man in negotiations between Lewis and the various mine owners' associations. A genial, broad-faced former football player, Moses gets along for the most part on a friendly basis with Lewis, and can meet Lewis' famed expletives with some of his own.

The association will set up shop here on October 1, with Moses at the helm at a reported $65,000 a year salary. Moses has been president of H. C. Frick Coke Co., kingpin of "Big Steel's coal empire, for the past 13 years. He has been negotiating with Lewis since 1943.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

Temporary Appointees Authorized for Jobs Left by Servicemen

The Civil Service Commission today was moving toward placing all appointments in Government on a temporary basis for the duration.

A step in that direction was taken yesterday when it authorized agencies to make temporary appointments to fill jobs vacated by employes who enter the armed forces.

Unfortunately for the commission it had to be pushed into taking the action. Pressure from both the Congress and Federal agencies compelled the commission to act. The failure of the commission to move ahead on an emergency personnel program growing out of the Korean fighting has resulted in the Whitten rider to force the commision to place most personnel actions in Government on a temporary basis.

That amendment provides for temporary reinstatements, transfers and grade promotions throughout Government. It also directs the Civil Service Commission to make "full use" of its authority to require agencies to make temporary appointments.

It was the intention of Representative Whitten (D., Miss.) to "freeze" permanent appointees at their present number, but to allow the commission to make permanent appointments to those permanent jobs that are vacated by death, retirement, etc. But Civil Service officials are of the opinion that the rider will require all appointments to be made on a temporary basis, and Whitten is inclined to agree with them after restudying his amendment.

Whitten explains, however, that employes can be promoted on a temporary basis to the vacated permanent jobs and be given regular appointments to them after the emergency.

Meantime, the commission, conceding that the Whitten rider will be enacted into law, has asked the Comptroller General to rule on several questions on its administration. The rider states that laid off employes can't be transferred, promoted, or reinstated to jobs of a higher grade and salary than they held on September 1.

Civil Service wants to know if only laid off persons are involved. Also, if after reinstatement, they can be promoted; if the rider covers persons laid off prior to September 1, etc.

A new type of emergency-indefinite appointment was approved by Civil Service to fill-in for persons who join the armed forces. And it's a safe bet the commission will run smack into trouble on this issue.

In brief, what the commission proposes to do is to "freeze" persons in those temporary jobs until the veterans return to claim them. The replacements can't be given grade promotions, they won't be eligible for transfer, and they won't be under the Civil Service retirement system.

They can get in-grade promotions but they can be fired at any time, and they will be the first to go in any reduction

Barrett Requests 1951 Budget Fund To Equip and Arm 4000 Volunteers

The Metropolitan Police Department yesterday asked for $521,000 to equip the 4000-man auxiliary police force, formed in the name of civil defense.

The request went to the District Commissioners for inclusion in the 1951 District budget.

Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett said $462,800 is needed to arm and equip the force, $21,000 to hire eight clerks and stenographers for its headquarters, and $37,000 to establish an emergency radio system.

The cost to clothe and arm each member of the volunteer force is placed at $115.70.

Arms Question Open

Just when, if at all, the auxiliary force would be armed has not been decided.

Both District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young, in charge of the civil defense program, and Commissioner John Russell Young said yesterday that arming the force was a policy question which must be decided by the Commissioners as a board.

Acting Police Capt. Francis G. Pilkerton, in charge of recruiting the auxiliary force, said yesterday that from four to a dozen volunteers have turned up at the various police precincts. He estimated that it probably will be at least two weeks before any precinct has 50 men, minimum for a training unit.

Six Weeks' Training

The training program, he added, probably will take at least six weeks.

The money for the auxiliary force would be contained in the budget for the year beginning next July 1, more than nine months off. The request must pass scrutiny of Congress as well as of the Commissioners.

The police fund would be in addition to the $100,000 granted by Congress to get the District's civil defense program under way.

Breakdown of Costs

Here is the breakdown on unit cost and total item cost of the money asked by Barrett:

Steel helmets at $2 — $8000; short overcoats at $39—$156,000; trousers at $15—$60,000; caps at $2.50—$10,000; raincoats at $11—$44,000; boots at $3.50—$14,000; revolvers at $40—$160,000 batons (night sticks) at $1—$4000; whistles at 20 cents—$800; badges at $1.50—$6000.

Barrett told the Commissioners the $37,500 would establish an emergency radio system so police communications would not be interrupted in an emergency even if the phone lines and regular radio transmitters were knocked out.

North Virginia Asks Civil Defense Parley

The directors of civilian defense for Alexandria, Falls Church and the counties of Fairfax and Arlington resolved last night to ask Gov. John S. Battle to organize their defense plans.

Meeting in the Fairfax County Courthouse at 8 p. m., the group requested the Governor to authorize a regional conference on civilian defense, with Col. Guy N. Church, coordinator of defense for Fairfax County, as chairman.

Date of the conference is to be set by the Governor, but the directors suggested October 12.

Speaker at the meeting was J. H. Wyse, Virginia State coordinator of civilian defense. He said Virginia's defense plan was like that of World War II but was more elaborate.

Pointing out that the current plan is "very likely to be very expensive," Wyse said he could not say where funds would be obtained, since the Virginia State Legislature does not meet till 1952.

First Area Medical Unit Goes to War

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

The 382d Evacuation Hospital left from Union Station last night in a shower of kisses, smiles and some poorly suppressed tears.

Four hundred wives, children, other kin and friends turned out to see the unit off for Fort Lewis, Wash.

The unit, which went on active duty at Fort Myer September 11, was the first medical reserve unit to be called from the Washington area.

Earlier in the day the Navy announced recall in the near future of an unspecified number of Wave hospital corpsmen in first, second and third class petty officer ratings. It is the Navy's first involuntary recall of women reservists to active duty.

Among those in the 382d to leave last night were two doctors, Maj. Clarence R. Hartman and Maj. Joseph W. Cooch, and a dentist, Capt. Chester H. Baker.

Another doctor, Col. Raymond Maret, commanding officer, will leave Sunday.

Lieut. Col. Karl C. Corley, who had to resign the chairmanship of the District Medical Society's forthcoming 1950 annual assembly when the 382d was activated, Maj. Sidney L. Davidson, a dentist, Capt. John Marston Wilson, the unit's executive officer, are among those who already have left for Fort Lewis.

The unit's adjutant, First Lieut. Ralph E. Riggs, was one of those to leave last night. Among the nurses was Second Lieut. Catherine Belfield, who inspired the song, "Powder Your Face With Sunshine."

The Bureau of Naval Personnel said the Wave hospital corpsmen will be assigned to duty primarily in naval hospitals and large dispensaries in the United States to fill billets created by expansion of the naval service.

The new recall policy applies only to enlisted hospital corpsmen. The Navy has no plans at this time to recall involuntarily other categories of women reservists, either officer or enlisted, the bureau said.

The Navy, however, is continuing its appeal for officer and enlisted Wave reservists to volunteer for a minimum of one year of active duty as replacements for men qualified for sea duty.

Navy recruiters here yesterday took seven men into the Navy and 12 reservists who had been recalled.

The Marines enlisted one man and reenlisted one former member of the corps from among 10 applicants.

Senate Confirms Emory Smith for Municipal Court

The Senate last night unanimously confirmed the nomination of Emory Byington Smith to be an associate judge of the District Municipal Court. The vote came without debate a few moments before the Senate adjourned at 11:30 p. m.

Smith was nominated by President Truman on August 1. The Senate District Committee approved the nomination August 29, but action by the Senate was delayed.

Teacher Hit By Capital Transit Bus

Woman Critically Injured Crossing Benning Rd. From Traffic Island

Mrs. Dorothy Lynn, 39, substitute teacher in District schools, was critically injured yesterday when she was struck by a Capital Transit bus in the 3300 block of Benning rd. ne.

She was taken to Casualty Hospital with head injuries, a possible broken back, and internal hurts.

Police said Mrs. Lynn, who lives at 1308 Kenilworth ave. ne., was struck by the eastbound bus at about 3:25 p. m. as she ran south across Benning rd. from a center island.

Charles R. Mettler, 24, of 2246 S st. se., was the driver of the bus, according to police.

Two In Critical Condition

Two District teen-agers remained in critical condition at Arlington Hospital last night as the result of an accident on Shirley hwy., near the Arlington-Fairfax line Wednesday night.

They are Price Sanders, 16, of 615 I st. nw., and Robert Jones, 16, of 911 6th st. sw. Hospital authorities said Sanders suffered from head injuries and shock, and Jones from cuts, fractures of the right arm and leg, and shock.

Arlington police reported Sanders and Jones and three other boys were passengers in a 17-year-old "jalopy" driven by another 16-year-old.

The driver told police he applied his brakes when he saw another car enter the highway from Route 7. His auto overturned several times, and was demolished, police said.

Area Men Injured

The Associated Press reported from Charleston, W. Va., that two Greater Washington men were injured early yesterday when their car skidded off U. S. 60 just east of Charleston and smashed into a railroad crossing warning.

They were identified as Elmer E. Bernard, 30, of 2544 14th st. nw., and Lewis I. Walker, 26, of Route 2, Hideaway rd., Fairfax, Va. Bernard was hospitalized with severe lacerations, and Walker was released after treatment for a scalp laceration.

The men, connected with the Columbia Credit Corp. of Washington, were traveling to Huntington, W. Va., when a blowout caused the accident.

Two Drivers' Traffic Charges Are Ruled Out

A traffic dispute between an Arlington deputy sheriff and a Georgetown University law student wound up as a "no decision" case in Arlington County Court yesterday.

Judge Hugh Reid dismissed reckless driving charges against both Deputy George Watt and Francis Drumm, 422 N. Thomas st., Arlington, after hearing their versions of an incident which prompted them to swear out warrants against each other Monday. Judge Reid said both drivers were at fault.

Watt said Drumm passed him on the wrong side on Washington blvd., and drove through a red light. Drumm claimed Watt refused to yield the right of way, and tried to escape the deputy sheriff when the latter made a "threatening gesture."

Blood-Typing Project Set In Hyattstown, Md., Sept. 26

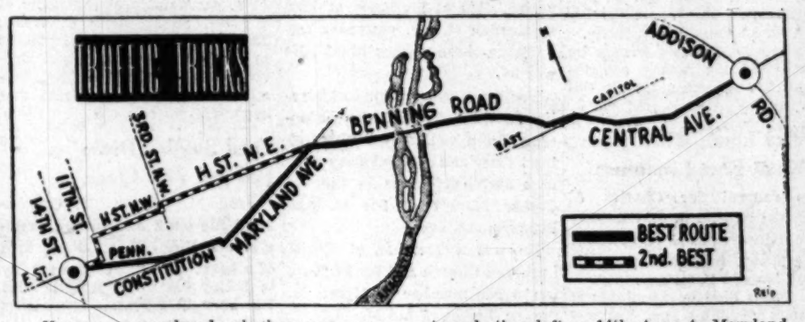
The Hyattstown Volunteer Fire Department, with the only ambulance between Frederick and Gaithersburg, yesterday announced a blood-typing program for the 25 square miles that it serves.

All residents of the area have been asked to come to the firehouse at 7:30 p. m., September 26. Their blood will be typed and the Rh factor determined.

Emergency cases handled by the department are taken to the Frederick Memorial Hospital where there is no blood bank, chief W. L. Burdette explained. Each donor will be given a card, and lists of donors and types will be kept in the ambulance and the firehouse.

Red Cross officials said that Hyattstown, population 100, is the smallest town in the country to launch a blood-typing program.

Capitol Heights to Downtown Washington Takes 27.5 Minutes Via Maryland Avenue



Have you wondered whether you are taking the quickest route to work? Traffic Tricks, recommended routes developed from the Regional Highway Planning Survey of Metropolitan Washington, has the answer on the fast way to get to 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

RESIDENTS of Tolston Heights, Maryland Park Capitol Heights, Carmody Hills, Seat Pleasant, Md., and Glendale, Deanewood, Benning and Kenilworth in the District, should take this route:

From the intersection of Central ave. and Addison rd. in Capitol Heights take Central ave. through East Capitol st., right on Benning rd. ne. across the Benning Bridge, left on Maryland ave. ne., right on Constitution ave., right on Pennsylvania ave. nw. to 14th st. nw. In peak hours, take H st., off Benning rd., then left on 14th st. ne. to Maryland ave. ne., since a turn from Benning to Maryland ave. is banned.

THE AVERAGE peak traffic time is 27.5 minutes for the 7.6-mile distance. From the origin intersection it should take 12 minutes to the bridge.

This route saves time for motorists on the area between Benning Bridge and downtown by avoiding the business sections.

Cardozo High May Be Health Center Site

District Health Department officials yesterday made plans to bid for the old Cardozo High School or its site for a proposed Northwest Health Center.

The building, at 9th st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., was made available to District Commissioners on Wednesday by the Board of Education.

The school leaders found the old building's sagging floors and general state of disrepair unworthy to accommodate students. The Negro high school is now located in the former Central High building, at 13th and Clifton sts. nw.

Henry S. Gavens, budget and administrative officer of the Health Department, said the Cardozo site was "ideal" for the department's proposed health center. Moreover, he said, department officials are "interested" in whether or not the present building could be repaired to save the cost of razing the structure and building a new one.

The center presently is housed in the Polk School, 7th and O sts.

Controversial

Sesqui Drops School Show Program

The Sesquicentennial Commission yesterday withdrew its request to District schools for permission to present scenes from the play "Faith of Our Fathers" before high-school audiences.

Paul M. Massman, general manager of the commission, said further appearances had been canceled to "avoid submerging the the great educational and patriotic message" of the play "in a controversy over long-established laws and customs" in the District.

The action came after Massman telephoned Superintendent Hobart M. Corning about the possibility of the mixed cast appearing before school audiences.

A group of 12 white and two Negro actors on Tuesday was banned from the stage of the white Anacostia High School by the principal, Mrs. Opal Corkery.

Dr. Corning backed Mrs. Corkery, stating that mixed entertainers never before had appeared in District schools.

The mixed cast presented a performance at the Negro Armstrong High School Wednesday with the approval of Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent of Negro schools. A performance at the white McKinley High School was postponed, then canceled.

Massman said yesterday that by withdrawing the shows from schools, the commission hoped to relieve school officials of "embarrassment that was unfortunately occasioned by misunderstanding as to the assigning of actors." He said school officials had not requested the withdrawal but had expressed regret that the shows could not go on.

Dr. Corning yesterday said he thought the incident "very unfortunate."

"It is too bad it has created misunderstandings and intensified racial feelings."

The National Council of Negro Women, meanwhile, in a letter to the Board of Education, described the banning of the actors at Anacostia as "outrageous and unwarranted flaunting of racism." The group also announced that it had asked President Truman to intervene as chairman of the commission.

County Refuses Police Aid to Takoma Park

The City of Takoma Park, straining its small police force to keep school crossings guarded, has asked to borrow some Montgomery County policemen during school hours.

But County Manager Irving G. McNayr said yesterday he had written Takoma Clerk-Treasurer Harold Hilliard that the County cannot provide the policemen because of the possibility of creating a "jurisdictional" problem.

Takoma Park Police Chief Lieut. Earl C. Thomas said he is having to keep "several" of his 12 policemen on overtime to meet the situation at the city's four dangerous school intersections.

More than a year ago, the county—at the request of Takoma Park—pulled its own policemen out of the city, which then took over its own policing.

Despite this shift, Takoma Park officials pointed out, Montgomery County provided civilian school crossing guards all during the last school year but recently announced they will not be made available this winter.

County Manager McNayr said he wrote the city on Wednesday that Montgomery police now guard all county intersections immediately adjacent to Takoma Park, but that the city should "take care of its own problem."

He suggested that the city hire its own civilian patrolmen to watch the four intersections at Cedar and Philadelphia aves., Chicago and Philadelphia aves., Park and Maple aves., and Carroll and Denwood aves.

Police Complete Auto Theft Ring Roundup, Arresting Two

Roundup of a slick-operating auto theft ring has been completed with the arrest of two more men, police declared yesterday.

They announced arrest of Charles W. Pastros, 22, of 7212 Flower ave., Takoma Park, Md., an engineer at the Continental Hotel, and John E. Smith, 26, whose exact address is unknown to police.

Smith was arrested by police in Miami, Fla., at the request of local authorities. Washington police have not yet learned whether he will waive extradition.

Wednesday, local police disclosed the arrest of three other alleged members of the auto theft ring—a 17-year-old juvenile and Leo C. Condolon, 22, of 1901 Roanoke st., Green Meadows, Md., and Richard B. Riggin, 22, of 3935 Georgia ave. nw.

Arrested shortly after midnight, Pastros was charged with grand larceny and later in the day was taken before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence who set bond at $1000 and continued the case until October 11. The cases of Condolon and Riggin also have been continued until that date.

Plan to Hike Chest Goal To Get Study By Officials

Five Percent Boost Would Give Reserve For District Needs Of Armed Services

Community Chest Federation officials today will consider a proposal to increase the Red Feather campaign goal by 5 percent to assure an emergency reserve for the community needs of the armed forces.

The proposal will be discussed at a joint meeting of the Chest's executive, budget and campaign committees at 4 p. m. in the Washington Hotel.

If approved, the present goal of $4,100,000 would be boosted to $4,260,000.

The increase was recommended recently by the Community Chests and Councils of America, Inc. which urged all member chests throughout the country to allocate a 5 percent emergency fund for the armed forces and other war-related purposes.

Edward J. Keyes, executive director of the Federation, said today's meeting will consider what agencies would receive the added money and method of distributing.

Under its present quota, the Federation has budgeted $71,727 for Associated Services for the Armed Forces (successor to the USO). ASAF consists of the Jewish Welfare Board, the YMCA and the National Catholic Community Service.

Meanwhile, Joseph D. Kaufman and Percy C. Brady, co-chairman of ASAF, are seeking an appointment with the District Commissioners to work out a method of cooperating with the Armed Forces Hospitality Committee, recently formed by the city heads also to provide services and assistance to men and women in uniform here.

In a telegram to the Commissioners following a meeting Tuesday, the Citizens' Committee of ASAF approved the idea of setting up a community-wide planning committee. However, the group opposed a combined planning and operating committee as envisaged by the District heads.

Bucket Strangles Gardener In Freak Elevator Accident

Mr. Tierney

Tierney's body was found on top of a hand-operator elevator in a tool shed on the home grounds.

Detective Sergt. Lawrence Hartnett of the homicide squad said this is what apparently happened:

Tierney had walked up to the second floor of the tool shed to get a bucket of grass seed. He was carrying an empty bucket. He was standing on a section of flooring that goes up when the elevator rises.

He pulled the rope to bring up the elevator and slipped before he could step back from the section that rose with the elevator. The elevator would not have crushed him against the roof of the second floor, but as he fell his head lodged in the empty bucket and the edge of the bucket pressed against his throat in such a manner that he was strangled.

Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

A native of Ireland, Tierney had lived in Washington for about 40 years. He lived at the home.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Winifred Casbey, of 229 E st. ne.; a son, Martin, of Chicago; two brothers, Patrick, of 1360 East Capitol st. and John of Hyattsville, and a sister, Mrs. Robert Courbat of Silver Spring, Md.

As Judge Orders

Defendant's Fine Is Paid By Accuser

David L. Miller yesterday paid the fine of a woman who had been convicted Wednesday of stealing his watch.

The 43-year-old inmate of Soldiers Home thus brought to an end one of the most unusual sentences in Municipal Court history.

Miller testified Wednesday that he met Mrs. Alma Lee Dugent, 1023 4th st. ne., in a downtown grille September 14 and took her to a room. When he woke up, Miller said, Mrs. Dugent and his $30 watch had disappeared. She pleaded guilty.

In court, Judge George D. Nielson told Miller he was as guilty of some crime as Mrs. Dugent was of petty larceny. He sentenced the woman to serve 30 days in jail or pay a fine of $25, and told Miller to pay half the fine.

Miller agreed, then quickly disappeared.

But court officials reported yesterday that Miller had paid the entire fine, and had left the courthouse with Mrs. Nugent and her husband.

Stolen Auto Has a Short, Strange Trip

An Alexandria plumber yesterday pleaded guilty to stealing a councilman's brand new automobile, which he abandoned the next day, by coincidence, in front of another councilman's house.

The plumber, Earl Kennedy, 29, of 16 E. Delray ave., Alexandria, pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny in Alexandria Civil and Police Court. Judge James R. Duncan held him in $1000 bond for action of the grand jury. He told police he had taken a ride to Charlottesville, Va.

The stolen car, belonging to Councilman Albert A. Smoot, was stolen the night of July 25 from in front of Smoot's home, 410 Duke st., Alexandria. It was found the next day bearing stolen Connecticut tags, in front of Councilman James M. Duncan's home, 100 W. Walnut st., Alexandria.

District Asks Funds to Run Golf Courses

Funds to operate the city's five public golf courses are requested by the District Recreation Department in its annual budget request.

The budget, released yesterday by the District Commissioners, also seeks an appropriation for two new swimming pools.

The first, for white swimmers, would be located at Fort Reno Park. The other, for Negroes, would be at the Randall Recreation Center.

In all the Recreation Department asked $3,913,227 to operate in the 1952 fiscal year beginning next July. The sum is $2,312,227 more than the current appropriation.

Would Add 42 to Staff

The budget would provide for two new playground supervisors and 40 additional recreational directors.

It also would launch the department on a playground improvement program that would add five new shelter buildings and provide lights for the Turkey Thicket playground.

The Recreation Department asked for $275,000 to take over operation of Interior Department-owned golf courses from Concessionnaire S. G. Loeffler. The board would set aside $175,000 of the sum to purchase Loeffler's equipment. The remainder would be working capital.

The board said that the $275,000 would be repaid to the District "over a period of years." It estimated that income from the courses next year would amount to $465,000 and expenses $377,000, leaving a profit of $88,000.

$1,016,000 for Pools

The request for the swimming pools appeared in the budget for the third time. In previous years the funds have been refused by the Commissioners. The board sought $1,016,000 to build the two "year-round" pools.

The five new shelter buildings would be constructed at Dakota, Hamilton, Harrison, Lafayette and Stoddert playgrounds. Money also was sought for additional buildings and remodeling of present buildings at the Macomb, Banneker, Park View and Sherwood play areas.

New recreational directors were requested for the following playgrounds: Anacostia, Benning, Brentwood, Buchanan, Congress Heights, Coolidge, Dakota, Eckington, Fort Dupont, Georgetown, Hillcrest (2), Hine, Jefferson, Langdon Park, Livingston, Macfarland, Powell, Simon (2), Sousa (2), Stead (2), and Taft.

Also for Cardozo, Deanwood, Fort Chapman, Fort Stanton (2), Francis, Kelly Miller, Randall and Spingarn.

Yom Kippur Ends; Jews Break Fast

Thousands of Jews in the Washington area broke their fast at sunset last night, following a day of continuous prayers in over a score of local temples and synagogues.

A sounding of the ram's horn at dusk brought to an end the Day of Atonement, most solemn of the Jewish religious holidays. It was the climax of 10 days of pentence following Rosh Hashonoh.

Most Jews immediately began looking forward to the third major holy day of the month, known as Sukkos, the Feast of the Tabernacles. It starts at sunset Monday, and is the longest and most joyous of the religious year.

Historic Battle To Be Reenacted Tonight at Basin

The historic battle between the American frigate "Constitution" and the British "Guerriere" will be reenacted at 8 p.m. today and Saturday at the Tidal Basin, the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission said yesterday.

The 30-foot replica boats will also repeat the performance the following weekend, September 29 and 30, Carter Barron, executive vice chairman said, to permit a greater number of visitors and school children to see the reenactment of the historic War of 1812 Naval battle.

The replica frigates were built under the direction of Lieut. Comdr. Carl M. J. von Zeilinski, U.S.N.R., for the President's Cup Regatta last Friday.

He succeeds George J. Jones, who retired last June after 31 years in the post.

District Seeks $526,000 for 2 Fire Houses

A request for $526,000 to build the new engine houses in Southeast Washington was the biggest new item in the $5,466,574 District Fire Department budget estimate released yesterday.

Fire Chief Joseph A. Mayhew asked for funds to build on recently acquired sites at 49th and East Capitol sts. se. and at 24th and Irving sts. se.

The population of these areas has tripled in the last 10 years, Mayhew said, making additional fire protection "imperative in the immediate future." He estimated each building would cost $263,000.

Mayhew's 1952 requests, which exceed his current appropriation by about $800,000, also include $217,230 to replace worn-out apparatus and $60,000 to create 19 additional jobs.

He wants to buy 10 new pumping engines, an aerial ladder truck, a rescue squad wagon to replace a converted pumper, an ambulance and five passenger cars.

New personnel sought includes two sergeants to instruct in the department's school, three privates for administrative work, four privates in the apparatus maintenance division, six privates in the communications division, two privates in the property division and two telephone operators.

Examiner Approves Rent Rise for 69 Units

A 3.5 percent rent increase has been tentatively approved for 69 apartment units at 3945 Connecticut ave. nw. The recommendation of District Rent Control Examiner William T. Kane will become final unless protest is made to the District rent control administrator by September 30.

With the increase, monthly rents which now range from $40.20 to $80.25 would be boosted to range from $41.60 to $83.95. The owner, T. F. Schneider Corp., had asked for 6 percent rent increase.

Opposition to Good Housing Is Attacked by Keyserling

Of all the basic needs of the American people, good housing is the least wanted, Leon H. Keyserling, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, declared last night.

Keyserling told the annual meeting of the Washington Housing Association that these are the two reasons for this condition:

1. Until the Korean conflict, the Nation had the resources for widespread good housing, but citizens were not educated to this fact.

2. The opposition to good housing is "more powerful, better financed and more dishonest" than opposition to any other basic need of the American people.

"This opposition," said Keyserling, "is against almost every phase of the battle to promote housing."

At last night's meeting, held in the General Services Auditorium, six new members were elected to the board of directors of the Washington Housing Association and four directors were reelected.

Elected to the board were:

Father Leo J. Coady, director of the Catholic Charities of the District of Columbia; Mrs. Adrian Fisher, cochairman of the League of Women Voters Committee on the Community Chest drive; Frank O'Connor, president of the Washington Building and Construction Trades Council, AFL.

Also Philip Schiff, Washington representative for the National Jewish Welfare Board and chairman, Montgomery County Citizens Advisory Committee on Housing; Glenn E. Watts, executive secretary, D. C. Industrial Union Council, CIO; Mrs. Cazenove, formerly on the budget committee of the United Community Services.

Reelected to the board were John W. Andrews, writer; Mrs. C. Carroll Glover, jr., civic leader; Charles Leuk, member of the board of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Miss Edith Rockwood, of the U. S. Children's Bureau.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THE MAYFLOWER Lounge, which opens at 7:30 p. m. Monday, is Georgian in motif now. Decorators have worked for the effect of a high ceilinged stately Georgian ballroom. The color rose is carried out in the brocaded upholstered sofas and banquettes, the rose and gold metallic draperies, with imported antique Italian taffeta valances.

A tremendous crystal chandelier in the center of the lounge will be reflected around the room in the wall sconces, whose prisms are copies of the center chandelier.

Artini and Consuelo, as usual, will be handling the fall-opening chores of the floor show. The graceful improvisations of this team are always a favorite with Washingtonians—they have become synonymous with lounge openings.

The Champagne and Orchids Night is not till October 20 this year. The lounge, with Teddy and Eric at the door as usual, will do business prosaicly until then. Emphasis this year, however, will be on dinner dancing, a feature formally passed over lightly in the lounge.

Bob Grant brings his orchestra to the Mayflower Monday. Grant is an attractive young man who plays the violin. Like most bands booked there, his music is smooth, but catchy and lively.

He has appeared at the Persian Room of the Hotel Plaza, the Savoy Plaza, the Embassy Club and the McAlpin Hotel in New York, Ciro's and the Trocadero in Hollywood.

Record Bars Negro Teacher From U. of Va.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Sept. 21 (AP).—The record of a Richmond Negro school teacher "is not such as to permit her to be enrolled" in the University of Virginia and accordingly "no consideration has been given to her race or color," a University official has advised her counsel.

Lindley J. Stiles, dean of the University's department of education, made public today a letter to Martin A. Martin, Richmond, attorney for Alfreda Louise Madison.

Martin had written Dean Stiles to ask if Miss Madison would be permitted to enroll for extension work to be given by the University at Richmond Professional Institute and if not whether such refusal would be because of her "race and color."

Dean Stiles advised Martin that extension students who take graduate work offered by the University's extension division are enrolled by the several participating institutions. His letter added:

"Miss Madison's record is not such as to permit her to be enrolled in the University and for that reason no consideration has been given to her race or color . . ."

Shave and Haircut: $1.90

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 21 (AP).—Beginning Tuesday, it will cost a man $1.90 to get a shave and a haircut in union barber shops here. The Barbers' Employers Guild voted last night to boost the price of haircuts from 85 cents to $1.15 and shaves from 50 cents to 75.

HOW TO ACCUMULATE A FORTUNE BY USING YOUR VISION IN SELECTING ACREAGE FOR FUTURE INCREASE VALUE

When I bought Chevy Chase, D. C., where I built a large city, I bought my first acreage from Mr. Glover, late president of the Riggs National Bank. I broke ground where the Chevy Chase Theater is located, 30 years ago. That was all woods then. Try to buy it now for less than $2,000,000 an acre. Try it! Lots of other ground in the shopping center there is worth a million dollars an acre. I have other acreage which looks equally as promising. I have nearly a mile and a half frontage on River and Bradley Roads overlooking the Congressional Club. I am building my own home right now just opposite the entrance of the club. This home has the finest setting of any home in this part of the United States. God Almighty made this beautiful setting. I didn't make it, and if you want anything good you have to work with God Almighty, and that is what I am doing right now. You might ride out on River Road and look at the setting of this home. I am going out directly with my son and get another thrill like you will when you look at it. We have 500 acres southeast in the zone of the new South Capitol St. Bridge; 100 acres have been sold, and you can have the remainder as an entirety at the small sum of $4000 an acre. They propose to build a new bridge to this section and the South Capitol St. and Penn. Ave. Bridge is furnishing a great deal of traffic up through this way. The Baltimore Blvd. is coming down in here and that will make a complete link between the North and the South. Reach me at my home, WO. 0933. I only work a half-hour a day now at my office between 9:30 and 10 a. m. at the Colorado Bldg. I used to work 18 hours a day. FULTON R. GORDON, owner, Brokers, attention!

Old Dominion College of Automobile Knowledge

Dean Jerry Slagle says:

"Let's have a little fun out of describing cars in collegiate slang. Since I don't know the expressions you boys and girls are using these days, how about giving me a hand? For every car description you send me in authentic college slang, and which we use, I'll give you $1.00; publish your name, address and college in our ad. Write your collegiate descriptions of any of the cars listed below—mail to our Alexandria address.

Walter Winchell . . . In New York

Memos to the Editor

During our summer holiday we inspected the files and encountered the following brevities in our scripts . . . We went back to January, 1945 . . . They included a number of duds, of course . . . But look at these!

Oct. 7, 1945: Unless some diplomats pull their punches in the next five months, millions of men will again be pulling triggers within the next five years . . . Sept. 23rd, 1945: Russia has revealed territorial interest in everything from the Danish Baltic Islands to a port in the Red Sea. Mr. and Mrs. America, it doesn't look very good to me from this microphone . . . Sept. 16th, 1945: Russian diplomats and British-American diplomats have about as much confidence in each other as rival camps of pickpockets. London and Washington fear that Russia wants to dominate Europe . . . July 8th, 1945: Russia's military power against any Asiatic nation is now twice what it was against Germany!

June 10th, 1945: The Soviet commandant declares that the Communist Party as such is not functioning in Berlin. Want to bet? . . . May 27th, 1945: For reasons best known to itself, Russia refuses to allow any British or American missions into the so-called liberated areas . . . May 20th, 1945: I hate Fascism from the Right and I hate Fascism from the Left. That's Communism spelled sideways . . . June 10th, 1945: Beyond question, the Communists as well as the Nazis achieved a deep penetration into high American places. Something should be done!

Oct. 14th, 1945: Diplomatic deadlock between the Big Three is deepening. The situation is much more grave than the public realizes . . . Nov. 14th, 1945: Moscow on the surface continues to recognize Chiang Kai-shek, but Russian artillery and supplies are being handed to Chiang's enemies by Russia . . . Feb. 24th, 1946: Russian intelligence has more than 1,500 agents now operating in the United States. Does Sec'y of State Byrnes wish to deny that under oath?

April 7th, 1946: The pattern for the next five years will be home-made revolutions financed and armed in other nations . . . Sept. 15th, 1946: The U. S. will go to any limits to assure Russia of Russia's defense, but the U. S. will also go to any limits to stop Russian domination of the world . . . Sept. 22nd, 1946: Our Army and Navy say we are taking no steps to prepare for a preventive war. Well, then, don't you think it's time we did? . . . Sept. 22nd, 1946: Six months ago, Byrnes, Acheson, Cohen and others in the State Dept. were for appeasing Russia at that time. But Molotov's excessive demands crystallized the opposition. Don't throw away your uniform!

Oct. 13th, 1946: Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Eden of London will make a surprising announcement . . . Nov. 3rd, 1946: Behind the scenes the Big Four are agreed that veto power will stick Don't let the debates fool you. Small nations are simply out of luck . . . Feb. 23rd, 1947: Far more importance than whether any politician returns to Washington in 1948 is whether or not American boys will have to return to uniforms by 1950.

April 20th, 1947: Mr. Whiskers is checking a former top scientist once on the atomic bomb project. Alleged commy connections . . . June 1st, 1947: Northern Korea is now bristling with tommyguns . . . July 6th, 1947: American stockpiling of strategic materiels has begun. Over 100 million dollars in orders will be in effect soon . . . Nov. 9th, 1947: The reason behind the Russians' offer for withdrawal of all troops from Korea is simple. A packaged revolution is all ready . . . April 18th, 1948: American atomic scientists believe the Russians will have the atomic bomb by Jan. 1, 1953. However, I know some British experts who disagree. They fear Russia will have the bomb by October, 1949!

April 25th, 1948: Contracts were signed last Thursday by the U. S. and a large manufacturer for 3 million lbs. of paper. For selective service forms . . . June 6th, 1948: The Near East may result in some high cabinet changes. Dean Acheson, I am told, may replace Sec'y of State George Marshall . . . Sept. 5th, 1948: The current spy investigation is not a red herring. Our top intelligence chiefs believe it is a great menace. The truth is that the deepest secrets of our government are an open book in Moscow . . . Nov. 21st, 1948: The air force of 70 squadrons is being quietly put to sleep on the ridiculous ground that the budget won't stand it . . . Nov. 28th, 1948: It takes 3 years for a British divorce. I hear Mrs. Anthony Eden plans another marriage. His name is Dr. Robert Hedges, a N. Y. gynecologist, formerly with the 9th Evacuation Hosp. Big secret.

Dec. 4th, 1948: Attention National Press Club, Washington: The New York commies are scared stiff tonight. They hear that Lee Pressman, the lawyer, is ready to talk! . . . Jan. 1st, 1950: A top member of the Lawyers' Guild, once in gov't, has been named in secret testimony before a Congressional Committee as having attended Communist Party meetings in N. Y. C. . . . Jan. 8th, 1950: Princess Elizabeth is enceinte again. Since her trip to Malta her diet is simple ungarnished foods . . . Feb. 26th, 1950: Louis Johnson's resignation, White Housers whisper, would be received with sighs of regret and relief . . . June 11th, 1950: Rumors published this week that O'Dwyer will resign to go into private business are not true. The inside story is that His Honor has his eye on the Ambassadorship to Mexico. That is the only thing, I am told, which would tempt him out of City Hall.

Feb 13th, 1949: The loveliest movie star of them all has found a new love. He is a famed director from Italy. Her husband knows all about it . . . June 25th, 1950: Despite the statement by Gov. Dewey that he will not seek re-election, friends say he may reconsider at the Saratoga Convention on Sept. 7th . . . July 23rd, 1950: Gov. Dewey may allow himself to be drafted for re-election because of the "national emergency" . . . March 6th, 1949: The Navy is crushed by the appointment of Louis Johnson as new Sec'y of Defense . . . Dec. 4th, 1949: Insiders at the White House tell intimates that the cabinet is not big enough to hold both Dean Acheson and Louis Johnson, the Secretary of Defeat. One must go in 1950 . . . Jan. 2nd, 1950: Madeleine Carroll's exciting new romance is one of Life mag's brass.

'How to Be Deliriously Happy'

Don't Be Bored—Live A Full Life, With 'Zist'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Please don't take the Foible Gompkin method seriously, gentle reader. "How To Be Deliriously Happy" is a burlesque, in its own fashion, of all the "inspirational" and "how to" books of modern times.

Ira Wallach is a magazine writer and author of "The Horn and The Roses." These articles are from the recent book, "How To Be Deliriously Happy."

By Ira Wallach

CHAPTER FIVE

Years ago my dear friend, Jonathan C. Kirkley, said to me as we passed each other on the street. "No man need to be bored who lives his life with—zist."

There are the words that can change your life!

Zist, to those of you who are unfamiliar with the word, expresses the best quantities of zip and zest.

Thaddeus Badduk Confesses

One brisk autumn evening Thaddeus Badduk dropped into the Temple of Joy. Badduk sat in the chair I offered, yawned rather ostentatiously, and then began to speak in a colorless monotone.

"Foible Gompkin, I am horribly bored," he said.

"Tell me about your life, Badduk," I invited.

His voice did not change pitch as he answered. "I am an accountant. I have been married for fifteen years. Everyone morning I get up at 7:15. I eat breakfast consisting of dry cereal, one egg sunny side up, toast, and coffee. I catch the 8:36 to the city. I work from nine to one and from two to five.

"In between, I have lunch which consists of tomato juice, a tunafish salad sandwich on white toast, a cup cake, and coffee. Then, after my day's work, I go home. I eat dinner. After dinner I read the paper and listen to the radio. Then I go to bed.

Poker Once A Month

"Once a month I play poker and get slightly drunk. Two weeks every summer I take a vacation. This is my life."

Thaddeus Badduk yawned again.

I must confess I was a little impatient.

"Thaddeus Badduk," I said sternly, "you have everything for which a man could ask. Everything. Then why is it you are bored? Is it spiritual inertia which keeps you from leading your life with zist?"

"Teach me to be zistful," he implored, with simple faith.

"It is easy," I replied. "Tell me about your morning again. Let us start with breakfast. What of this dry cereal you eat? Think back. Tell me how you eat it."

Thaddeus Budduk concentrated. His thoughts collected, he murmured, "I take a bowl from the closet over the sink and fill it half full with the dry cereal.

"Then I pour warm milk into the bowl until the cereal is just about covered. I follow this with a generous sprinkling of sugar. I wait a few minutes until the cereal has the consistency of library paste.

No Effort at All

"Then I take a soup spoon and begin to eat. I seldom chew. It just slides down.

"When I am all finished, I wipe the corner of my mouth with a piece of toast. Then I pick up the bowl and drink whatever milk is left in the bottom. The milk is syrupy and awfully sweet from the leftover sugar." He shuddered. "After the cereal I ——"

"Stop, Thaddeus Badduk," I said in as kindly a tone as I could summon. "Let us begin right here and see how you can bring zist even to your breakfast."

"Please!" It was the cry of a soul from a self-made purgatory.

"Very well. Are you the slave of habit? Answer yes or no."

"Yes," he muttered, head down.

"Good. We will smash the chains of your slavery! First, my friend, less milk on the cereal. Do not allow it time to soak up the liquid. Attack it while it is still crisp and crackles between the teeth. Close your eyes now and listen for the sound!"

He closed his eyes.

A Merry, Zistful Sound

"Is it not a merry sound, a zistful sound, Thaddeus Badduk?" I asked.

"It is, Foible Gompkin," he whispered, wonder in his voice.

"Excellent! Now as to sugar. A little les sugar. Perhaps your palate will find it strange, but you will discover that a bit less sugar adds a certain piquancy to this orthodox dish. And Badduck, use colder milk.

"Colder milk," he murmured in genuine astonishment.

"And Badduck," I continued, rising to my feet, "look me in the eye and answer one question—with fearless honesty. Have you ever considered adding a banana to your cereal?"

Slowly he shook his head from side to side. "What a blind fool I've been, Foible Gompkin!"

Having cleared our first hurdle, I was able more easily to teach Thaddeus Badduk to live zistfully.

I performed no magic other than the magic in the energy all about us. I merely applied the same principles to other aspects of his living.

Be Happy—In Zist!

I taught him to catch his train in a new way, to "put less milk" on his daily work in the office, to eat lunch zistfully as he had learned to eat breakfast, to bring "less sugar" and more of himself to his nightly radio listening, to "add that banana" to his monthly poker sessions.

Today a morning visitor to the home of Thaddeus Badduk is always impressed by the cheerful crackle of cereal. Such a visitor will inevitably say to himself, "I have passed a threshold over which boredom never casts its shadow." And the visitor is right.

Thaddeus Badduk's every moment is a glorious affirmation of that magic statement: No man need be bored who lives his life with—zist! These 11 words are for you as well as for Thaddeus Badduk. Let them change your life!

Strike-It-Rich Really Gives Money Away

By John Crosby

"STRIKE IT RICH," (CBS—WTOP, 4 p. m., Monday through Friday) is one of those rare things, a give-away that gives away money, cash of the realm, in place of refrigerators and washing machines. Also, it gives the dough away to people who need it badly. Where an air of cupidity rises like steam from most give-aways, "Strike It Rich" is marked by a sort of quiet desperation.

Hull

No one gets on the program unless he has a problem that requires cash, and since 1947 the program has dug up some lulus. Guests have included a man who wanted artificial legs so he could get a job, parents who wanted to finance an operation for their little child, and a French war bride who wanted to bring Mama over to meet her GI husband.

One of the odder problems was that of a Mrs. Kwoka of Bridgeport, Conn. Her husband had built their house himself but ran out of funds before they got the bathroom facilities. The family used her sister's bathroom two miles away and Mrs. Kwoka was pretty tired of the situation. She won $310.

THE QUIZ MASTER on "Strike It Rich" is Warren Hull, a veteran if ever there was one of the quiz profession. As quizzers go, he is rather quiet and enormously considerate of the quizzees. It was one of those quizzes where the contestants start with $15 provided by the program and bet all or part of it that they can provide the right answers. Like all these things, it starts easy—"Is a caboose a car on a freight train, a special car for President Truman, or a special food for moose?"—and gets harder, though it isn't unusual for the average well-informed person to know every answer on a half-hour show.

Hull, though, is a cautious man. If a contestant wants $150 for some project, he urges him to take it easy after he reaches that sum, rather than to shoot the works and risk losing it all. A person who shoots the works right down the line has a maximum possibility of winning about $480, to which the program adds $20 to make an even $500. Quite a few people walk off with the $500, too.

Since 1947, this particular philanthropy has cost the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company, the sponsor, about a quarter of a million dollars. The company, far from minding, seems almost anxious to give away more money. Last April they upped "Strike It Rich" from once a week to five times a week, which means they stand to lose as much as $10,000 a week in cash, depending on how bright the customers are in any week.

NOT ALL OF THEM are bright. A couple of Texans told Hull once, "We're just a couple of ignorant hillbillies from Texas," and then proved it by going broke on the third question.

Occasionally, some of the problem people can't get to New York, in which case a standin, usually a celebrity of some sort, does the question-answering for him. Among the standins have been Abe Burrows, Lany Ross, Jaunita Hall and Ruby Keeler. Miss Keeler, for example, won $300 for an invalid veteran of World War I who wanted the money to set up a workshop.

Not all the cases are so heart-rending. A couple of young kids who'd had dates together in China had a reunion in New York and wanted money to go on a tear. They won $325, which will buy a real wingding, even in New York.

Absent-Minded Model Shows Embarrassment

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Sept. 21 (AP).—A beautiful, young and shapely model strolled across the stage during a fashion show in Odense last night, showing a housecoat and nightgown.

The housecoat was handsome. The model, with a fascinating smile, threw open the housecoat to display the nightgown to the audience. There was a gasp and then vigorous applause.

She had forgotten to don the nightgown.

Arlington Folks Pitch in and Eat

When 3000 Drop In for Dinner, Better Try a Barbecue

By Lucia Brown

EVERYBODY LOVES a barbecue!

If you don't believe it, ask the folks out in northern Virginia—specifically, Miss Henrietta Strobel.

Miss Strobel it was who thought up the idea of giving a barbecue for the benefit of the new Anderson Orthopedic Hospital in Arlington. Many doubts and difficulties cropped up, but last Saturday night the barbecue materialized—and so did 3000 persons!

The size of the crowd staggered those who staged the big benefit on the hospital lawn. Hastily they rushed out to buy 50 pounds of hamburger to supplement the 200 pounds of sirloin tip and the 200 pounds of spareribs that had already been served the hungry mob.

"BY 10:30, WE were down to selling barbecued hamburger on buns for 25 cents apiece, but we fed everybody that came!" says Miss Strobel. The venture also netted a sizable sum for the 40-bed hospital, now nearing completion at the corner of 25th st., and Army and Navy dr.

A longtime nurse in Alexandria, Miss Strobel knows at first hand the great need for a place of this type to care for polio victims and other orthopedic cases of the northern Virginia area. The hospital—started as a clinic back in 1945—has been a community projects all along the way. The Arlington Junior Chamber of Commerce has sponsored it, most of the material for the building has been donated, the Northern Virginia Builders Association and the Northern Virginia Plumbers Association have given the labor. But there was still need for cash money for equipment and Miss Strobel thought she could help raise it.

"When she first spoke of the barbecue idea to me," says D. A. Dean, superintendent of the hospital, "I was uncertain about it. But it's proven the easiest way of raising money we ever attempted."

COMMUNITY COMMITTEES pitched in to help make the plans, with Miss Strobel as general chairman. Arthur Post, Arlington County real estate man, was a patient in the hospital and overheard talk of the difficulty of getting someone to do the barbecuing.

"I'm from California and I've put on lots of big barbecues," he said, "I'll help—fix the pits, buy the meat, cook it and everything."

Women of the community made potato salad and apple pies by the dozen. The menu also included square barbecue buns, sliced tomatoes, celery, olives, radish curls, and plenty of hot coffee.

Already, the group is planning next year's dinner—and vowing they'll have lots more food on hand now that they know how large a crowd a barbecue will bring out. This year's effort, though, is a good example of just how to go about putting on a barbecue for 3000. Here, for instance, is the way Mr. Post handled the meat situation:

"WE WANTED TO BARBECUE a whole steer but we didn't have the necessary turning mechanism," he says. "Instead, we bought 12 to 15 pound sirloin tips and whole sides of spareribs—about 200 pounds of each kind of meat."

First, a pit 10 feet long and 4 feet wide was dug to a depth of 5 feet. Half-inch wire chicken mesh was stretched over this with stakes at a height about 18 inches above the ground. The fire in the pit was started 5 or 6 hours before the barbecuing began, so the oak and hickory would burn down to a nice bed of coals. Mr. Post and his committee started the barbecuing about noon.

The only seasoning used on the meat before it cooked—or while it cooked—was salt and pepper. This Mr. Post sprinkled on liberally. Then he seared each side of the meat until it was good and brown.

NEXT STEP WAS TO quench the fire a bit so it would be low and slow. Best way it to sprinkle water over it. You have to add more water from time to time, Mr. Post says, to keep the flames at the right degree. The slow roasting then continues for 3 to 4 hours, with frequent turnings of the big pieces of meat.

Mr. Post doesn't hold with using barbecue sauce in cooking the meat. He does serve it with the meat when it's done. But he thinks the natural meat flavor is lots better than anything you can add.

"Barbecue sauce makes a brown slick coating on the outside if you put it on while it's cooking," he says. "I don't like that and, besides, it's not needed. If you sear the meat first, then cook slowly, it stays good and moist until done. I find that 75 percent of the people don't want barbecue sauce even when it's provided."

Just in case you're one of the 25 percent who do like barbecue sauce, though, Mr. Post gave us his recipe. Here it is:

BARBECUE SAUCE
(To serve about 30 persons)

¾ pound butter (or 6 ounces olive oil)
5 tablespoons vinegar
½ of a 12-oz. bottle of ketchup
½ of a 12-oz. bottle of Worcestershire sauce
1 cup tomato juice
3 ribs of celery, chopped fine
2 tablespoons grated onion
1 clove garlic, minced
3 bay leaves
1 lemon, sliced thin
1½ cups water

Mix all ingredients except butter and simmer together 15 minutes. Strain and add butter.

SOME 600 POUNDS of potatoes were boiled to make salad for the crowd. The potatoes were cooked and cut up in advance, as were other ingredients. However, they were all brought to the barbecue separately, Miss Strobel told us. The salad was mixed in comparatively small batches as needed, in order to rule out the danger of food poisoning from salad that has stood a long time. Here is her recipe:

POTATO SALAD
(To serve 300 persons)

1 bushel (60 pounds) potatoes
4 dozen hard-cooked eggs
6 green peppers, chopped
6 pimientoes, chopped
36 cups chopped celery
3 cups chopped onions
3 pints French dressing
6 quarts mayonnaise
3 cups prepared mustard
6 tablespoons paprika
1½ cups salt
12 teaspoons white pepper

Cook potatoes until tender but not soft. Peel and cut in pieces. Marinate with the French dressing and onions for a short while before combining with other ingredients.

FOUR HUNDRED APPLE PIES were made for the occasion by Arlington and Alexandria women. Fifty of them were baked the day before the barbecue in Miss Strobel's oven and that of a neighbor. A group of friends banded together to do the work. Here's the recipe they followed:

APPLE PIE
(To make 50 pies)

Pastry: 21 pounds flour
¾ cup salt
10 pounds shortening
Water

Filling: 55 pounds apples
6 tablespoons cinnamon (1 box)
23 pounds sugar
1 pound margarine
1 dozen lemons

Cut the shortening into the flour and salt mixture. (Divide into lots in various bowls so it will be easier to handle.) Add enough cold water to make thick pastry dough.

Line pans with dough, then fill with apple mixture. Make latter by slicing apples and combining with sugar, cinnamon, and lemon juice. Dot with margarine and put on top crust. Bake in very hot oven (450 degrees) 15 minutes; reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake 45 minutes longer.

Golden Raisin Cookies

½ cup golden or seedless raisins
1 egg
½ cup brown sugar (packed)
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¾ teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup rolled oats or quick-cooking oats

Rinse raisins and drain. Beat egg and add sugar gradually while beating. Add salt, spice, flavoring, oats and raisins, and blend well. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto greased cookie sheet. Bake in moderate hot oven (375 degrees F.) 10 to 12 minutes. Remove from cookie sheet at once.

Makes about 24 2-inch cookies.

Rouge Needs Discreet Hand To Be Artful

By Ann Lawrence
Sixth day of Winifred's beauty program

ROUGE, artfully applied, can give a young, healthful appearance. Wrongly put on, it can make even the prettiest, youngest face look hard and old.

Winifred, assuming correctly that rouge is a flatterer, incorrectly assumed that any way she put it on, hit or miss, was bound to be good.

She had started from her temple and blended the color down to where it was almost parallel with her lipline. She had chosen a flaming red shade.

THE FIRST MISTAKE to correct was the shade. In place of her red-red dry rouge, we chose a cream rouge, coral-toned to harmonize with her golden skin tones. Three dots were placed to outline the area which she was to blend. Because her cheeks are the widest area of her face, the problem was to make her face appear longer, thereby cutting the width. Emphasizing the cheekbones would minimize the fullness of the cheeks.

To accomplish this, the dominant rouge area was kept high on the cheekbones, yet lightly carried down so as the eye followed the rouge, the illusion of length and bony cheekbones was created.

WINIFRED had never used cream rouge, but she soon learned to blend it skillfully. She learned that her face must be slightly moist if cream rouge is to go on smoothly and evenly. Her powder base furnished this moisture.

The particular rouge selected comes in the shape of a lipstick, is quite creamy and easy to apply. Two trials and Winifred was able to smooth it nicely, fading away the edges so that there was no saying where the rouge began or ended.

Homemakers All Need a Holiday

By Ida Jean Kain

HOMEMAKING, FINE ART that it is, can become awfully daily . . . Monday, Tuesday and always. And nothing takes the fun out of day-to-day living like boredom.

Would you like to do something that's fun and freeing, gets you out of the house and away from routine, helps you make new friends and find stimulating interests? If that's exactly what you've been missing, why not decide to do something about it?

Ladies Day Out and Homemakers Holiday were started by the YWCA to meet this very need, and homemakers enthusiastically tell what a happy difference it has made in their lives. They are two of the most popular programs the "Y" has ever sponsored.

LADIES DAY OUT was established first and is designed primarily for the young housewife with children. One morning each week housewives all over the country go to local "Y's" to enjoy a complete change of scene and pace—recreational dancing, slimnastic exercises, swimming, badminton, tennis and golf. There's no danger of overdoing, since a preliminary physical exam grades individuals according to strength.

What about the youngsters? A special feature of Ladies Day Out is a nursery school with trained supervisors for children from 2 to 6 years old. And the kiddies love it. They learn rhythms and arts and crafts, play games, sing, and learn to share toys and get along happily with other children. Mothers are particularly grateful for this part of their day out.

When homemakers began asking for a similar program in the afternoon, the Washington YWCA started Homemakers Holiday. Miss Sara Bruce, Health Education Director at the Washington 'Y", says this program is making a big hit too . . . the activity the ladies seem to enjoy most is rhythmic exercise.

I JUST WISH you could hear some of the women tell what these programs have done for them. As one mother expressed it: "Many of my friends don't see how I have enough energy to go to the "Y" every week—but it's a real holiday for me. It honestly gives me a new lease on life, and I go home with a fresh viewpoint. My youngsters have a wonderful time too."

VISITING LAWYERS, members of the American and Canadian Bar Associations and their wives, and visiting agriculturalists and businessmen from Denmark were featured in the party whirl yesterday.

In addition, France's Naval Attache, Capt. Georges Cabanier, and Mme. Cabanier entertained at cocktails yesterday in honor of Admiral Roger Lambert, Chief of Staff of the French Navy and a visitor in town.

Mrs. Francis W. Hill, jr., was in charge of arrangements for the tea at the Sulgrave Club yesterday afternoon given by wives of the District of Columbia Bar Association for wives of the visiting American and Canadian Bar Associations.

The Danish Ambassador Henrik de Kauffmann's cocktail party was strictly stag, honoring his compatriots who are touring the United States under the auspices of ECA. The Ambassador came down from New York, where he heads Denmark's delegation to U. N. General Assembly.

TEA WAS EARLY at the Sulgrave Club, the ladies gathering from 3 to 5 p. m.

Receiving with Mrs. Hill were Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice; Mrs. Harold Gallagher, wife of the president of the American Bar Association; Mrs. Jo V. Morgan, wife of the president of the District of Columbia Bar Association; Mrs. Arthur N. Carter, wife of the president of the Canadian Bar Association; Mrs. J. Howard McGrath, wife of the Attorney General; Lady Birckett, wife of the Privy Counselor of the High Court of England, and Mme. Toulouse, wife of the head of the Paris Bar.

Taking their turn at three tea tables set up in the dining room, drawing room and ballroom were four Supreme Court Justices' wives, Mrs. Harold Burton, Mrs. Robert Jackson, Mrs. Tom Clark and Mrs. Sherman Minton. Also pouring were Mrs. Weddall Ferris, Mrs. Harold Stephens, Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark and Mrs. Wilbur K. Miller.

FOR SWEET CHARITY'S SAKE

MRS. JOHN STEELMAN, wife of the Assistant to President Truman, is a walking advertisement for the Community Chest's first annual Red Feather Cavalcade. Pretty and blonde Emma Steelman is chairman of the big dramatic and musical pageant which will kick-off the 1951 Community Chest campaign in Constitution Hall on Thursday, October 12, at 8 p. m.

So—Mrs. Steelman made herself a hat, as chic as any Paris number, of blue faille piped in white with a covey of red feathers jutting frontwards.

First vice chairman of the event is Mrs. Daniel W. Bell. Mrs. Patrick Hayes is second vice chairman. Box chairman is Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture. Other committee members are Mrs. Edward Mangum, production chairman; William Gemmill, assistant production chairman; Miss Mary Pauline Perry, script chairman; Paul Callaway, choral music chairman; Mrs. Thomas Eberly, costume chairman, and Miss Gertrude Prisley, secretary to the committee.

CLARE FOSTER, alert to the needs of the war wounded, has opened volunteer collection headquarters at Quarters E, 2300 E st., where she lives with her parents, Vice Admiral Edwin D. Foster, chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, and Mrs. Foster.

Miss Foster and Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg, wife of the Air Force Chief of Staff, have been working together on ways to ease the discomforts of the boys returned for hospitalization from the Korean front. Clare will take in playing cards, books, current magazines—they must be in top condition—and distribute them herself where they're needed most.

TRAVEL DEP'T

WHEN YOU'RE FED UP with the razzle-dazzle of this frenzied world, retire to the Azores, is the advice of Alfred Lilienthal, just back from Europe.

Mr. Lilienthal spent a week in the Atlantic islands on board a freighter which took him to them all. In San Miguel, Al found the perfect spot for his old age. Life in the island moves at a leisurely pace for the 15,000 inhabitants. There is ocean bathing, a beautiful lake, sulpha springs for what ails you and roadways banked with hydrangeas. Pineapples are the main export, and living is cheap.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Matron, Whose Parents Once Seemed Ideal Couple, Is Shocked to Learn That Dad's Having Affair With Mother's Cousin; How Reform Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 23, very happily married and the mother of a dear little girl. I grew up in ideal surroundings, in a home where love and understanding were abundant. My parents were very close to each other and to the children. But it hardly seems like the same home today.

A situation has arisen that I don't know how to handle, yet I feel that I can't just sit and pretend not to notice. My husband and I have our own home near my parents; and two years ago my mother's cousin came to live with mother and dad. After the first year I realized there was something wrong in the relationship between dad and Cousin Betty but I couldn't quite fathom it. Then suddenly I realized they were having a full-fledged affair. I was never so shocked in my life.

My dad has always held top-flight positions and drawn an excellent salary. He is a very brilliant man but at this point doesn't seem to see anything clearly. He always detested anything off-color and he would be the first to criticize someone else's doing just what he is doing now.

Mother knows nothing about the affair and dad doesn't know that I am aware of it. Betty has since left their home and gone to another city, where dad meets her on pretense of taking a business trip. I want to help dad get squared around, for his own sake and mother's sake. Would my talking to him about it be apt to push him further in Betty's direction? Or would the shame of learning that I know about his double life, be the shock that would put him right? Is it better to let him drift, and hope that in time he will straighten out?

I am positive he thinks he has fallen out of love with his wife and in love with Betty, and thinks it is as simple as that. But it is so unlike him to lead such a twisted life that I know he is terribly confused. He seems to put a good deal of stock in my ideas, and if only I knew what course to take, I believe I could help him. I am sure he wouldn't consult a psychiatrist. V. V.

DEAR V. V.: It seems to me that you are terribly confused too, and unable to get the drift or see things straight. Maybe you've always underestimated your mother's caliber and have never really known your father's character; and possibly the scales are just beginning to fall from your eyes in adult years, now that you have a beloved husband and child, and are somewhat weaned from father-worship.

To explain,—you speak of the sadly changed atmosphere in your parents' home today, that once was joyous with love and understanding, you say. You attribute this change to a disruptive affair that still persists, between your father and Cousin Betty, who departed the home under a cloud after sabotaging the family peace,—according to your story. And yet you insist that your mother doesn't know what's going on.

That version of the situation can't make sense, inasmuch as any wife who ever has been "close" to her husband knows intuitively when trouble is afoot; and unless she is deaf, dumb and blind, she can hardly overlook an affair conducted under her very roof.

The inside story may be that your parents had one "true love" in common in your formative years, namely, devotion to their children. And maybe this accounts for your impression of idyllic rapport. Possibly your father's good behavior on that score covered a multitude of sins in his record outside the home. Perhaps he was never very faithful to your mother; maybe he consistently enjoyed success with the ladies, while she kept the household on an even keel, tactfully ignoring his "weakness" because of his estential importance to the children's security and her own.

Then as the children were launched, more or less, perhaps your parents were faced with the basic emptiness of their marriage, and to mitigate the loneliness and somewhat compensate for the children's departure, maybe they fetched Cousin Betty to the rescue (presumably). And maybe your dad ran true to form in getting involved with her; and possibly your mother's absent air is her usual technique of keeping the marriage together at such times. The thoroughly depressed atmosphere of home may be chiefly due to "children gone,"—not to the affair, grievous though it is.

I think the situation is too precarious to warrant guesswork treatment. As you have neither the specialist training nor the graybeard wisdom to grasp the intricacies of the problem, better leave things in your mother's hands. Remember she's had adult knowledge of your dad since before you were born, and if she can't bring the marriage to safe harbor, I'm pretty certain you can't do it for her. M. H.

BETH McLEAN bakes a beautiful ham! She's "Martha Logan" of the Swift & Co. home economics service

Behind the Name

MILLIONS OF HOMEMAKERS from coast to coast know Martha Logan, home economist for Swift & Co. The dynamic person behind the name is Mrs. Beth Bailey McLean, director of the company's home economics division. A graduate of Stout Institute and holder of a master of science degree from Iowa State College, she was professor of foods at Iowa State before going into commercial home economics work. She has built up the fine home economics service of Swift & Co. until today it is the largest of its kind in any food industry, embracing 11 test kitchens throughout this country and Canada. She is also widely known as the author of the book, "Meal Planning and Table Service."

Women in the Food Industry

Thirty Cooks Don't Spoil the Broth

This is the sixth of a series of Friday features on prominent food economists.

By Martha Logan
Director, Home Economics Division, Swift & Co.

WHAT'S BEHIND a recipe? Where do those taste-tempting food photographs originate? A trip behind the scenes in a food company to find the answers to these questions brings us to the busy, gleaming test kitchens of Swift & Co. in Chicago where a capable staff of home economists produces a steady flow of new recipes, products and information for homemakers.

The material coming from these sparkling kitchens bear the name of Martha Logan, known as "America's busiest homemaker." Actually, no one person can accomplish all that is done by Martha Logan. The name is carried, instead, by the more than 30 highly trained home economists who work for Swift & Co. in the headquarters test kitchens in Chicago and in 10 other key cities throughout this country and Canada.

The activities of these professional home economists are channeled to bring cooking and meal-planning aids to American and Canadian homemakers. The staff serves two purposes. One is to bring all possible aid to homemakers while the other is to bring the woman's point of view into company planning. Thus, the homemaker is represented at all times in the production of a new product, package or label.

Recipe testing and development is a fascinating phase of the Martha Logan activity. While especially trained home economists with highly developed food knowledge work on the recipes, every Martha Logan contributes ideas and suggestions to keep a never-ending supply of new and tempting recipe suggestions coming from test kitchens. More than training and theory go into these suggestions, however, for each home economist is a practical cook also who keeps up her own home and knows the shopping and meal preparation problems of homemakers.

LET US FOLLOW the development of a recipe for Veal Scallopini. In my home I prepared veal cutlets and decided to vary the usual preparation of them by marinating them in a garlic-flavored mixture of oil and lemon juice. I served them and found they had the stamp of approval of my family.

Arriving at the Martha Logan test kitchens the following day I suggested to the home economist in charge of recipe development that the cutlets prepared in that way could be the basis for an easy-to-prepare and delicious version of the Italian favorite, Veal Scallopini.

With these suggestions the staff then set about preparing many variations of ingredients to determine the exact balance of ingredients for the finest-flavored dish. When the best possible combination had been achieved and prepared by several different home economists to check the method of preparation it was ready for final approval by the entire Martha Logan staff. The Veal Scallopini recipe below was produced:

VEAL SCALLOPINI
Yield: 6 Servings

1½ pounds veal steak cut ½ inch thick
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
½ cup salad oil
¼ cup lemon juice
1 clove garlic
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ cup flour
¼ cup shortening
1 medium onion, sliced thin
1 green pepper, cut in strips
1 can (10 oz.) chicken bouillon
¼ pound mushrooms
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
6 pimiento olives, sliced

Cut veal into serving pieces. Make sauce by combining salt, paprika, oil, lemon juice, garlic, mustard, nutmeg, and sugar. Beat well, or shake in bottle to combine thoroughly. Lay veal flat in baking pan. Pour sauce over veal. Turn pieces of veal to coat with sauce. Let stand 15 minutes. Remove garlic.

Lift veal from sauce. Dip into flour. Brown well in heated shortening in skillet. Add onion and green pepper. Combine chicken bouillon with remaining sauce and pour over veal. Cover and cook slowly until veal is tender—about 40 minutes.

Clean and slice mushrooms. Brown lightly in butter. Add mushrooms and olives to veal. Stir and dip sauce over veal. Cook about 5 minutes. Serve veal with sauce poured over it.

Crusty French Bread Can Be Made in American Kitchens With Right Recipe

DEAR ANNE:

I would greatly appreciate a recipe for real sour-dough French bread.

J. N., Alexandria, Va.

FRENCH BREAD

1 cup lukewarm water
1½ teaspoons salt
1 cake compressed yeast
1 tablespoon soft shortening
3½ to 3¾ cups sifted all-purpose flour

Mix lukewarm water, salt and crumbled yeast together. Stir until yeast is well dissolved. Add shortening, then sifted flour. Mix in first with spoon, then with hand.

When dough begins to leave sides of bowl, turn out on lightly floured board and knead until it's smooth and elastic and doesn't stick to board. Place in greased bowl, turning once to bring greased side up. Cover with damp cloth and let rise in draft-free spot (80 degrees) for 2 hours.

Punch down dough well and let rise again until almost double in bulk (about 45 minutes.) Punch down again. Roll dough out into 15 by 10 inch oblong. Roll up tightly toward you, beginning with wide side. Seal edges by pinching together.

With a hand on each end, roll gently back and forth to lengthen loaf and taper ends. Place it diagonally on lightly greased, cornmeal-sprinkled baking sheet. Make ¼-inch slashes in dough at 2-inch intervals, or one slash lengthwise. Brush top with cold water. Let stand uncovered about 1½ hours. Brush again and bake.

Bake 10 minutes in hot oven (425 degrees.) Remove from oven and brush again. Reduce temperature to 375 degrees and bake 10 minutes more. Remove from oven and brush again. Sprinkle with sesame or poppyseeds. Continue baking 15 or 20 minutes until golden brown.

P. S. For more glaze, less crustiness, use egg white wash (1 egg white, slightly beaten, with 1 tablespoon water.)

By Richard L. Coe

"THE MEN," at the Palace, is an unusual picture that packs a true, emotional wallop. You should see it.

What makes this outstanding is that it tackles a searing visual story yet manages to be so vibrant that you leave it filled with wonder at the courage of the human heart.

For it is the story of some wounded war veterans paralyzed from the waist down. It gives you pause to kick about your own ailments, to consider the ghastly price of war and at the same time to marvel at the determination within us all, the God-given will to live.

Because most of "The Men" are actual paraplegics and the story was filmed at the Birmingham Veterans Hospital in California, there is the feel of real life to the picture. As valuable as this is the playing of Marlon Brando in the leading role.

This young actor, who veered from the National's "The Eagle Has Two Heads" to his stunning Stanley of "A Streetcar Named Desire," makes a compelling figure of this hero. From the bitterness of a young athlete conscious only of his shattered body, he grows from hope to hope for his second chance at life. We watch him taunted by his fellow invalids, inspired by one and made to realize he's still wanted by the girl who's long been his fiancee.

These scenes have bite and humor. When he's in a petulant morass, he's egged out of it by those who are as badly off as he, and when his first attempt at marriage breaks down he falls back only to give it a later, more aware try.

This wedding day episode strikes one of the few unconvincing notes in Carl Foreman's script; one hasn't been led to expect that his dogged bride will crack so quickly.

And while the story in outline may strike you as a trifle pat, it is convincing as to dialogue and playing.

The factual tone throughout, however, is what creates the essential honesty that makes "The Men" so alive. What the men in the ward say to each other, how they say it, how they scoot around in their chairs, on their ropes and in the water polo scenes are what you will take away with you.

In making such a difficult picture what the trade calls "entertaining," Producer Stanley Kramer adds another winner to those earlier out-of-the-way dramas, "Home of the Brave" and "Champion." Apart from Brando's individualistic performance, you'll also admire Everett Sloane's wise doctor, Teresa Wright's determined girl, Richard Erdman's wisecracking vet and Arthur Jurado's likable playing of the determined lad who builds himself up only to have his triumph snatched from him.

Fred Zinnemann's able direction rivals the job he did for "The Search."

Cummings Leads Merry Chase Through Comedy, 'Petty Girl'

By Orval Hopkins
Post Reporter

"THE PETTY GIRL." Columbia release produced by Nat Perrin. Screen play by Perrin from a story by Mary McCarthy. Photographed in Technicolor by William Snyder. Music by Harold Arlen. Lyrics by John Mercer. Directed by Henry Levin. At the Warner.

THE CAST

George Petty	Robert Cummings
Victoria Braymore	Joan Caulfield
Dr. Crutcher	Elsa Lanchester
Beardsley	Melville Cooper
Connie	Audrey Long
Prof. Whitman	Mary Wickes
Patrolman	John Ridgely
President Webb	Ian Wolfe
Kaye	Frank Jenks

THERE ARE ONE or two objections a person could raise about "The Petty Girl," the farce now at the Warner, but since the piece is on the whole successful entertainment, I think I will simply take the bull by the antlers and recommend it.

The story is preposterous, of course, but it has been cleverly written by Nat Perrin (from a story by Mary McCarthy), and Robert Cummings, who plays George Petty, takes care of the jokes in good, if sometimes overbroad, fashion. He is assisted in the jest department by Melville Cooper, of whom we see much too little in the film, and by Elsa Lanchester, whose antic talents are, I regret to say, almost entirely interred in this effort.

The plot, if any, details how Cummings pursues Joan Caulfield, a faculty employe at a musty old college, how he finally nails her and then nearly loses her. At least Columbia, which made this picture, would like you to think he nearly loses her. They didn't fool me a minute, let me tell you.

In the course of this, Cummings has a bout with a sailboat in which the slapstick was this thick. I enjoyed it immensely, and I also tittered foolishly when Cummings and Joan did a completely inane little thing about a worm. A fair sample of the Perrin dialogue might be this:

Process Server: One word we process servers always say is, "Where there's a window, there a way."

Cummings: I'd have sworn that was two words.

Or maybe it's just my sunny nature.

Among the objections, which as I say are mostly minor, would be: that Joan Caulfield, in the middle of a lady calypso-singer's song steps into the lady's shoes. Miss Caulfield can't wriggle with the lady and she can't sing with her. She should have stood at her ringside table. And that I'm getting pretty fed up with people who can't sing being cast as people who can sing. The Caulfield singing of some fair Harold Arlen-Johnny Mercer tunes was done by a voice I accuse of being Doris Day's. I don't know who did the Cummings singing. I'm sure Cummings didn't.

Just an Anecdote About Huntin' 'n Fission

Gordon Dean, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, told a pip of a story at the American Bar Association convention.

A New Mexico Indian who had been off hunting for a few days was returning to his native village early one morning several years ago.

A few miles from home, he decided to send word ahead to his family. So he built a fire, and sent up the traditional Indian smoke signals.

As if in answer, the heavens up ahead were lit up in a brilliant flash of light, followed by a billowing mushroom of smoke and vapor that stabbed 10 miles up into the New Mexico sky.

"Gee," murmured the awe-struck Indian: "I wish I'd said that."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I've noticed that quite a number of cars on our streets lately show no brake ("stop") lights when slowing down. A high percentage of them seem to be from Maryland. Maybe that's because of their inspection system; I don't know.

At any rate, it's dangerous to drive without properly functioning brake lights, and a word of reminder might be in order.

You might also caution motorists about the use of high beams (bright lights) in the city, where they're illegal. Many drivers refuse to "dim" even when subjected to a barrage of flashing lights from oncoming cars.

This is a very dangerous practice. I have seen a man killed because of it.

Remember those famous last words: "I won't dim mine until he dims his"?

Allen Barr
810 Whittier pl. nw.

Dear Allen:

Both points are well taken. A periodic checkup is a good idea, because light circuits can conk out shortly after a motorist's annual visit to the inspection station—and how is he to know that his "stop" lights aren't working?

Incidentally, my battery took quite a beating this summer when my stop light switch went haywire. The lights stayed on overnight, even when the brake pedal wasn't depressed.

"Happens all the time," the garageman told me. New switch plus labor (5 minutes) came to about $2. Bill.

PIED PRONUNCIATION DEPT.

ADD NAMES

Gretchen Hood of 1226 Fairmont st. nw., who teaches voice, has a new pupil named Bonnet. The girls will probably wind up opening a millinery shop.

THAT'S THE TICKET

R. L. Newton tells me that he saw this United Press dispatch in an out-of-town paper, but I don't recall seeing it locally:

"A Communist came through the United States 25th Division lines waving a UN surrender leaflet. 'Please give me more leaflets and I'll bring back other men,' he told an interpreter. 'They want to surrender, but do not have tickets.' He was given a handful of 'tickets,' and in a short time returned with four more Reds."

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Blanche Berlin of 812 Randolph st. nw. was out at the airport the other day when an Eastern Airlines employe brought a hearing aid over to the desk and said:

"Somebody left this hearing aid on the plane that just unloaded, and it looks like it's pretty valuable. Wanna put an announcement on the public addres system?"

"Sure," said the man behind the desk as he reached for the mike. But he stopped short, as a frown furrowed his brow. "Hey," he said, "if the owner doesn't have his hearing aid, how is he going to hear the announcement that it's lost?"

"Don't complicate my life," said the other man, shuffling off. "That's your problem."

'TWAS EVER THUS

Overheard in the Young Men's Shop: "The biggest mistake I ever made was teaching my wife to drive. Now I can never get the car."

No Tax Break for Little Fellow

By Drew Pearson

The Eighty-first Congress, despite much constructive legislation, will probably be known as the Congress which increased the workingman's taxes by as much as 20 percent while refusing to tax the war profits of big corporations.

Rep. Dingell

The most important debate on this was not in public but in the closed-door session of the Senate and House conferees where House members battled savagely to gain a few concessions for little taxpayers. One of the battlers was Democratic Congressman John Dingell of Detroit who at one point demanded:

"While we are making all these concessions to upper-bracket taxpayers and war profiteers, we should at least repeal some of the excise taxes on working people.

"Instead of plugging loopholes that benefit the oil industry and stock-market speculators, you are making the loopholes bigger—and more of them," Dingell angrily chided the Senators. "As long as you are in the mood to throw away money, why not make some concessions to the working girl and the man with four or five kids?"

However, the Michigan Democrat's demands that the excise on baby powder and oil, etc., be lifted fell on deaf ears. Finally, Dingell turned to GOP Senator Eugene Millikin of Colorado, a stanch defender of tax benefits to big bracketeers, and half jokingly asserted:

"Gene, if you don't support me on this—woe to you when you go back to Colorado to campaign this year."

Millikin chuckled, but said nothing.

Tax on GI Watches

Dingell then hurled into the teeth of the Senators a letter Gen. Omar Bradley had written Congress, urging that the excise tax on GI watches be rescinded.

"I want to see how much faith you have in General Bradley—how much weight his letter carries," the Michigander challenged. "How about it?"

This time Millikin didn't laugh. Neither did granite-faced Senator Walter George of Georgia and the other architects of the bill that exempts war profiteers. The Senators sat mum and defiant.

There was another bitter blowup over the proposed withholding tax on stock dividends. This was aimed to capture an estimated 160 to 170 million dollars which Uncle Sam loses each year because stockholders fail to report dividends in income-tax returns.

Again the Senators held back, though House conferees Bob Doughton of North Carolina, Jere Cooper of Tennesse, Wilbur Mills of Arkansas and Dingell strongly supported the withholding tax on dividends. George, who consistently battled for the top-bracket taxpayers in every other phase of the bill, made the amazing argument that the dividend clause would discriminate against "poor widows."

"The Government doesn't withhold taxes on wages under $500 a year," sermonized the Georgian. "Why tax the dividends of widows and people of moderate circumstances, which in many cases amount to less than $500 a year?"

"That argument doesn't hold water," hit back Dingell. "The object of this amendment is not to hurt women of small incomes, but to compel the reporting in income returns of about a billion dollars a year in dividends that escape taxation. Failure to report these dividends is a violation of the law.

"Furthermore, despite what you say, working people with wages under $500 a year sometimes are taxed. A Detroit auto worker may work only one week in a year, but a portion of that week's wages is nonetheless withheld by the Government."

GOP Representative Dan Reed of Dunkirk, N. Y., sided with the Senators, however, and the big-bracket taxpayers had a majority.

After bitter debate, a majority of the Senate conferees finally were won over to dividend withholding by Representative Cooper, who warned the five Senate conferees that the tax bill might be voted down on the House floor.

Faced with this ultimatum, Senator George voted with Tom Connally and Harry Byrd to include the dividend check-off. GOP Senators Eugene Millikin of Colorado and Hugh Butler of Nebraska dissented to the bitter end.

Fighting Communism

Congressional witch-hunters who smear innocent people could take a lesson from an "American way" campaign which the Veterans of Foreign Wars has launched against communism. The VFW campaign stresses "community service" to combat conditions on which foreign "isms" thrive—poverty, unemployment, illiteracy.

As the VFW's new commander, Charles C. Ralls of Seattle, explained to President Truman the other day: "The best way to lick communism is to get at the roots that propagate it. And those roots are chiefly poverty and ignorance. If we see to it that there are no hungry children or impoverished families in this country, we don't have to worry too much about communism."

Note—The VFW is offering $35,000 in prizes to its posts throughout the country for the best programs of "positive action against communism" through community services.
